Bill to Extend NRA and 7(a) For 2 Years Up in Senate

Action Follows Warning by Richberg Speed Is Vital.

Measure Expands Control of Trade

Bans Monopolies and Oppression of Small Industries.

The text of the bill to extend the NRA—Page Seven.

By Felix Bruner.

Spurred by White House and NRA demands for action, Senator Pat Harrison, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, yesterday introduced the Administration bill extending NRA for two years.

Introduction of the bill followed appearance before an executive session of the committee of Donald R. Richberg, chairman of the Recovery Board.

Richberg told the committee the impression was becoming general that Congress did not expect to extend the act and that this impression was making enforcement of codes and settlement of labor disputes difficult. He urged that the bill be introduced as evidence that action was intended.

The bill, much more detailed than the original act, tends to expand and increase the powers of the Government over industry rather than curtail them. It undertakes to define interstate commerce, the principal NRA stumbling block in the courts, but it makes the definition so broad as to cover almost everything.

Other Provisions.

Other provisions include:

Re-enactment of Section 7(a), guaranteeing the right of collective bargaining, without change.

Provision that codes must not sanction, promote or maintain monopolies or eliminate or oppress small industries. This strengthens the present law.

Provision, broadening present powers, that devices for controlling prices, production or distribution may be ordered when found necessary by the President to protect small industries. It also provides that such control may be effected for public utilities or natural resource industries "such as, among others, coal, oil or gas."

That the President may impose limited codes.

Provision that hours for labor may be fixed in imposed codes by the President within a certain limited range. Spaces for the hours in this range are left blank in the bill.

Provision that the President may fix "fair and reasonable" wages in imposed codes.

General Codes.

Provision for the President to put groups of small industries under general codes, with consent of the industries. The bill carries a provision fixing the maximum size (based upon number of workers employed) of industries that may come under these blanket codes, but here again the space for the figure is left blank, to be filled in later. This provision is entirely new.

Strengthening of the provision that there shall be no conflict with anti-trust laws.

Continuation of substantially the present set-up of code authorities, with wide powers in the hands of the President, but without the provision demanded by organized labor, that labor be given equal representation with industry on the boards.

Authorization of NRA to promote compliance by the use of "distinctive insignia or labels." There is nothing in the present act even suggesting the Blue Eagle.

Provision for a fine, of an amount yet to be specified, for code violations. The prison sentence provision is eliminated.

Licensing Provisions Out.

Elimination of all licensing provisions. The power given the President under the old law to license industries never has been exercised.

Provision that employes who can prove that hour and wage provisions have been violated may collect damages from employers. This is an addition to the old law.

Extension of all present codes for 90 days after expiration of the present law, June 16.

With introduction of the bill, all pretense that there was no Administration measure and that there would be none was dropped. The bill was written with the cooperation of Blackwell Smith, NRA counsel, with suggestions by Richberg, and following the rather indefinite proposals of the President's NRA message to Congress.

It was made clear that the measure was not a committee bill, but that it was introduced to provide a working basis for legislation. Immediately on introduction it was referred to the Finance Committee, which has been holding hearings on NRA for three weeks.

It was understood at the outset of the hearings that they were intended to obtain information on which a bill could be based. It was explained that the committee would draft a bill after the evidence was

Grand National Pays America $2,664,000; Reynoldstown Victor

$70,150 in D. C. Prizes; 4 in U. S. Capture Main Awards.

Hoofs clattered at Aintree, England, yesterday. Cable wires hummed. And money figuratively showered the world as the Irish Hospital Sweepstakes winners, their hopes riding on the racing horses, were made known.

To the United States came news that Americans had won $2,664,000 in the gigantic sweepstakes. Four Americans held tickets on Reynoldstown, the winning horse, and were to get $143,475 apiece.

To Washington came news that $70,150 in prize money was coming here, to five local ticket holders.

Treasury officials rubbed their hands. They announced that the tax collector would be knocking at the winners' doors. This was their announcement:

Those who won $143,000 would have to pay $55,732 in taxes. Those who won $72,000 would pay $17,100. Those who won $48,000 would pay $8,616. Those who won $38,000 would pay $6,075.

But the prize winners were happy anyhow.

Lester B. Teed, 27, Government Printing Office linotype operator, had a "nest egg" of $18,000—"for my old age"—because he listened to a gambler's advice against betting on a horse he never saw.

Teed held a ticket on Tapinois, one of the favorites to win the Grand National Steeplechase at Aintree, England, yesterday. For a time he turned a deaf ear to offers for all or any part of his ticket. Then a New York gambler offered $18,000, saying:

"Even a millionaire wouldn't bet $18,000 on a horse he never saw."

Teed sold. Tapinois fell at the first jump. Teed put $18,000 in the bank.

J. Harry Cunningham, secretary of the Gridiron Club, was the only Washingtonian to hold a ticket on a finishing horse. It was Lazy

N. Y. Heart Balm Ban Spreads to 8 States

By the Associated Press.

Albany, N. Y., March 29.—New York State tossed its heart balm laws overboard today with an allegation that male New Yorkers had been paying $10,000,000 a year tribute to "golddiggers and blackmailers."

Gov. Lehman signed a law which says that anyone with a broken heart in the Empire State must put in a claim within the next 60 days or forever relinquish any hope of collecting.

After that an attempt to convert disappointment into dollars in New York will be a felony punishable by $1,000 to $5,000 fine and one to ten years in prison.

With enactment of the new law, New York takes its place with Indiana, although Senator John J. McNaboe said the Indiana law "is not so drastic as mine."

The legislator, a New York City Democrat, said he had received many requests for copies of his bill and had been informed the same bill would be introduced in Texas, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Illinois and one of the Carolinas.

NRA Suggests Plan to Avert Mine Walkout

Proposes Code Extension to Keep 350,000 at Work.

A proposal to break the deadlock between miners and operators, which threatens to result in a walkout Monday of 350,000 bituminous coal diggers, was made yesterday by the National Industrial Recovery Board.

The board proposed that in lieu of a new wages and hours contract, the coal code, containing wage and hour provisions be extended from April 1 to June 16, the date of expiration of the present NRA law.

Donald R. Richberg, Recovery Board chairman, said that the miners and operators had been given until 10 a. m. today to decide whether they would agree to this proposal.

Acceptance of the proposal would be a victory for the operators. It would mean continuation of present wage scales and of the 35-hour week. Miners have been asking for a 30-hour week and a 10 per cent wage increase.

Not an Ultimatum.

Richberg said the plan was a proposal rather than an ultimatum, but it was indicated that if the parties refuse to accept it, the NRA will seek to impose the continuance of the code.

Operators and miners continued their joint session with the NRA board yesterday with no indication that they were near an agreement. Wage and hour provisions of the code expire simultaneously with expiration of the wage contract.

Miners have been holding out for weeks for the 30-hour week. In backing the 30-hour legislation in Congress they are in a position where they can not consistently accept a contract calling for more than 30 hours a week. The NRA proposal may give them a means of retreat if they choose to take it.

Following the conference in which Richberg made the code proposal, miners, led by John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, went into session to decide upon their answer.

Meanwhile, reports were current that Dr. Leo Wolman, head of the Justice Wheat Denies Courts Failed in D.C.

Jurist Appears at Final Hearing of Crime Unit; Prosecution Flayed.

By J. Bernard McDonnell.

The House District Crime Committee yesterday concluded two months of hearings into crime conditions, their cause and possible remedies.

Out of the hearings is expected to come a broad report recommending changes in existing laws and procedure and administration of District law enforcement agencies.

Drafting of the report will be begun next week by John R. Fitzpatrick, committee counsel, and committee members, Chairman Ran-Randolph said. He hopes the report will be ready for submission to the House within 20 days.

During the hearings the committee has heard Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police; Leslie C. Garnett, United States attorney, and others. A sharp clash with Representative Thomas L. Blanton, of Texas, was one of the features of the hearings.

Changes in the District attorney's office and among the high ranking officers of the Police Department are expected to result from the inquiry.

Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat, of the District Supreme Court, told the final hearing there "has not been any breakdown in our courts."

He spoke for himself and the other justices with whom he had conferred before appearing before the committee, he said.

"Our position is just about as good as that of any other comparable city," he said.

The praise voiced by the Chief Justice was in marked contrast to testimony earlier in the day of William A. Roberts, People's Counsel, and to testimony, given later by James M. Hepbron, managing director of the Baltimore Criminal Justice Commission.

"Our prosecution machinery in the District of Columbia, is inefficient," Mr. Roberts told the committee. "It is easily influenced and it breaks down under pressure

Cherry Blooms Dark as Mixup Keeps Floodlights in Storage

The Japanese cherry blossoms around the Tidal Basin will not be illuminated tomorrow night or any other night despite the fact that 350 floodlights designed for this purpose are in storage here and all the necessary conduits and cables are installed.

"The lights don't belong to us and besides we haven't the money to turn them on," said C. Marshall Finnan, superintendent of National Capital Parks.

"No illumination as far as we know," said C. Melvin Sharpe, of the Potomac Electric Power Co.

The "ridiculous situation," as Sharpe characterized it, originated in last year's highly ballyhooed cherry blossom festival. The committee on arrangements contracted with the PEPCO for installation of $2,200 worth of underground wiring, cables and other permanent equipment around the Tidal Basin. Four hundred and fifty floodlights were bought and the trees were drenched in illumination.

When the display ended and the crowds left, the floodlights were placed in a downtown store house. Last winter about 70 of the 450 were destroyed in a fire. A few more were broken but there are still enough left to serve again this year.

The Potomac Electric Power Co. has been paid only $1,100 of its $2,200 bill, but even so Sharpe negotiated yesterday with Finnan on the possibility of illumination tomorrow night. The conference ended in failure. Neither seemed to know who has custody of the fixtures which were purchased by a committee now extinct.

But if there won't be any light there at least will be spouting

New Deadlock Blocks Action On Relief Bill

Changes in Conference Provoke Storm of Protest.

Wallace, Tugwell and Ickes Resent Curbs on Authority.

By Robert C. Albright.

The hapless $4,880,000,000 works and relief bill last night was high on the shoals of another Administration disagreement, stranded there by tumultuous official protests against conference changes in the measure.

Despite the last-minute scurry for passage, the bill can not possibly be budged from its present reef until next week, and before it is finally passed may run another conference gantlet.

Conferees arrived at complete agreement on the bill Thursday night. Yesterday there was many a headache in official Washington when the report was read. Secretary of Interior Ickes, Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, Undersecretary of Agriculture Tugwell and others were listed among the disgruntled.

Protests Pour In.

Groomed for House passage yesterday, the report instead was indefinitely held up, as the protests poured in. The House may approve or reject the report Monday, but a point of order, inspired from Administration sources, is almost certain to be raised against it in the Senate.

Limitations and changes written into the bill by the conferees, many of whom are frankly antagonistic to the legislation, precipitated yesterday's official furor.

Here are a few of them:

1. Requirement that not less than one-third of loans or grants to States municipalities and subdivisions from the $900,000,000 earmarked for that purpose, be spent directly on labor. This is a new provision not carried in either House or Senate bill.

2. Provision that any administrator or other officer, members of any central board or other agency, and new State or regional administrators, be appointed by the President with consent of the Senate. This might require Senate confirmation of Ickes, Tugwell, Harry Hopkins or others designated by the President to run the program.

3. Flat rejection of conference amendments, said to have originated with Tugwell and other Administration officials, specifically providing for subsistence homestead projects, rural industrial communities, supplementary incomes for the destitute, acquisition of submarginal lands, and a broader rural power program.

Glass Leads Fight.

4. Retention, over the opposition of Secretary Wallace, of the Senate amendment authorizing the AAA to use work relief money in lieu of continuing processing taxes.

Insistence that one-third of all money lent or granted to States or other localities for relief projects be spent directly on work, was the target for Ickes' opposition. He is said to hold that municipal power plants and other projects requiring low labor expenditures are barred by the amendment.

Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, head of the Senate conferees, is candidly opposed to the Government entering competition with private business in this manner. He told reporters the amendment was intended to, and will, prevent the Government from lending money for municipal purchase of operating power plants. He took the position

Belgium Off Gold, Begins Its New Deal

Quits Bloc; Provisional Devaluation of 25% Set for Belga.

Vote of Confidence in Van Zeeland Program Held Assured.

By the United Press.

Brussels (Saturday), March 30.—The Chamber of Deputies' finance committee early today approved the new government's monetary measures, taking the country off the gold standard and putting it on a "managed currency basis" similar to President Roosevelt's United States program.

The chamber debated the monetary measures in a night-long session. A vote of confidence on the government's plan was expected by 5 or 6 a. m. (Midnight or 1 a. m. Eastern standard time).

The finance committee, 14 to 9, also approved a bill extending the government's special powers on financial affairs a year.

Program Attacked.

The opposition attacked Van Zeeland's plan, declaring the "Roosevelt experiment" was a failure. Van Zeeland responded:

"I deeply admire President Roosevelt, who not only succeeded in rescuing his country from a crisis but revolution. Nevertheless, I disapprove of his policy of lessening working hours and also his useless dollar devaluation."

The government's position was jeopardized somewhat by rising opposition of the Catholics and Liberals, augmented in the chamber by defection of some Socialists.

Defeat in the Senate was predicted on the government's money program.

The program, almost a carbon copy on a smaller scale of President Roosevelt's policies when he took office in the United States, provisionally devalues the belga 25 per cent below its present gold parity.

Stabilization Fund.

If and when an international agreement on currency stabilization is reached, the belga will be rebased on gold at a maximum devaluation of 30 per cent, according to the program. Meantime, it was stipulated, the Government will fix the level of exchange and insure the stability of the currency abroad by operation of a stabilization fund.

Outlining his program in his first appearance before Parliament as premier, Van Zeeland, a Princeton graduate and ardent admirer of President Roosevelt, declared the action would place the belga in a position of "unassailable strength."

Still following the lines pursued two years ago by the American President, the new premier, in office since Monday, asked special powers to govern during the economic crisis, with occasional consultation with Parliament.

Asks Deposit Guarantee.

He proposed that the National Bank's obligation to exchange gold for bank notes be suspended and asked State guarantee of bank deposits in order to reassure depositors against fear of frozen funds. This was a major part of President Roosevelt's program following the American banking crisis of 1933.

Private purchases of gold within the last two months, he said, coupled with heavy withdrawals from banks, put the National Bank in difficulties when it was forced to support the banks. Speculators, taking advantage of circumstances, added to the strain.

Under the circumstances, the

Hamilton Releases 2 Hostages In Memphis, Escapes With Aid

Enemy No. 1 Reported Heavily Armed; Companion Wounded in Battle; Pair Are Believed Dashing Across Oklahoma.

By the Associated Press.

Miami, Okla., March 29.—Federal and State officers raced southwest from here late today after receiving a telegraphic tip that Raymond Hamilton, hunted Texas killer, had just left Tulsa and was headed for this section.

Frank Wheelen, Federal Department of Justice operative from Tulsa, received the message. Accompanying him on the hunt were Deputy Sheriff Henry Blanton and Undersheriff Jim Elliott.

Hamilton twice has abandoned stolen automobiles on a lonely river road near here.

Fearing an attempt to free Henry Methvin, Texas desperado on trial here for the murder of Constable Cal Campbell, of Commerce, the guard at the county jail was strengthened.

By the Associated Press.

Memphis, Tenn., March 29.—Raymond Hamilton, the South's most desperate criminal, and an unidentified wounded companion, fresh from a new orgy of robberies, shooting and kidnapings, eluded officers today after abandoning two hostages in the heart of the city.

Armed with two machine guns, several rifles and a number of pistols, the desperadoes apparently headed out of Memphis immediately after leaving their hostages here, locked in the rear of a coupe.

However, Memphis detectives and Federal officers staged a series of raids on rooming houses and small hotels this afternoon and tonight on the possibility that the bandit pair might be seeking rest after 36 hours of crime and flight.

"We don't know where they are," Will T. Griffin, inspector of detectives, said. "They may have headed into Arkansas, and they may be hiding here."

Department of Justice Agents said that two men, a hotel bellhop had reported, as inquiring the direction to West Memphis, Ark., were in reality Hamilton's victims, inquiring the way back to Mssissippi.

The men released here were M. E. Smith, Jefferson Davis County (Mississippi), farm agent, and Ralph Bayliss, Prentiss, Merchant, who were abducted yesterday as hostages in the robbers' wild flight from Prentiss, where the outlaws looted a bank of $1,100.

"Hamilton told the two men he had $1,100 in his pockets," Griffin said. He added that Smith and Bayliss returned to Mississippi late

German Raiders Seize Nuns And Monks in Smuggling Plot

Law Prohibiting Money Export Violated, Charges Reich.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, March 29.—An unannounced number of nuns and monks have been arrested "in numerous Catholic convents," police said today, because of alleged violations of the laws prohibiting the exportation of foreign exchange.

The authorities said laws making mandatory a report to the Reichsbank of any foreign exchange held by German citizens also had been violated.

Numerous searchers in monasteries and convents in the middle of the month, police said, established the violations. They said that in the interest of further investigations, no details would be announced.

It was said, however, that at least 2,500,000 marks ($1,000,000) worth of foreign currencies and shares was involved. The alleged violators were assumed to be in institutions near the German frontiers.

Prayer services were held in confessional synod churches throughout Prussia tonight on behalf of three Hessian pastors who were taken to concentration camps, causing the Protestant church conflict to flare anew.

Information which reached the Confessional Synod told the story of the three clerics, the Rev. Ruhland, of Hirschhorn; the Rev. Peter Brunner, of Ramstajt, and the Rev. Wolff, of Woerstadt, all in the Free State of Hessen.

The pastors were said to have been taken to the notorious concen-

Smaller, Fewer Flags To Fly in Germany

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, March 29.—Flag waving, which has reached tremendous proportions in Nazi Germany, is to be reduced by a decree of the minister of war in order to economize on wool.

The size of the flags and the number of them used are to be cut down. The decree asked today that where more than one flag pole stands on a building or an estate others be eliminated whenever possible and only flags of small dimensions be used.

Eden and Red Dictator Confer for an Hour on Peace Aims.

Locarno Proposal Officially Denied

Britain, France, China, Japan, America and Soviet May Unite.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, March 29.—Authoritative quarters here today said Russian and British statesmen, meeting to discuss ways of safeguarding peace, considered inviting the United States to help five other interested nations guard against war in the Far East.

While the topics discussed at today's meetings were not disclosed, the Russians denied that the reported "Far Eastern Locarno" agreement had come up.

Despite the denial, informed quarters persisted in their belief that Joseph Stalin, Soviet dictator, and Maxim Litvinoff, foreign commissar, proposed to Capt. Anthony Eden, British lord privy seal, extension in some form of the Locarno security system to the Orient.

[Reliable sources at London also said they had received information from Moscow that the Far Eastern pact proposal was considered.]

Six-Power Agreement.

Included in the suggested pact, it was said, would be the United States, Great Britain, the Soviet, China, France and probably Japan.

Later, however, the Russians entered an official denial that they had proposed the Far Eastern pact. They declined to divulge the nature of the conversation between Eden and Stalin, saying only that the two went deeply into the international situation during their conference.

British quarters pointed out that Eden will have to report back to London before anything in the nature of an agreement for action to meet the dangers of war in Europe and Asia can be completed.

Observers said they believed the Anglo-Russian talks were revolving around three possibilities:

A way to compose Russo-German differences on the proposed Eastern European security pact.

British participation in some security arrangement without Germany if the latter refuses to enter on terms satisfactory to France.

Joint action through the League of Nations when the French raise the question of Germany's armament at the extraordinary session of the league council opening April 15.

These observers insisted, too, that the Far Eastern situation assuredly came in for treatment inasmuch as Litvinoff and other Soviet authorities have been insisting that guarantees of peace must apply in all quarters to be really effective.

Commerce Discussed.

The British said Eden and Litvinoff finished their exchanges on the Anglo-German conversations at Berlin this morning and thereafter took up questions bearing more directly on Anglo-Russian commercial and political relations.

"Different questions of the international situation interesting both countries were discussed," the Russians said.

The reported Far Eastern pact proposal was made known after the young British statesman, in company with Lord Chilston, British ambassador, called at Stalin's plainly furnished office in the Kremlin for one of the dictator's rare conferences.

There the British found Stalin—wearing gray tunic, blue riding breeches and high black boots—waiting with Litvinoff, Vyacheslaff Molotoff, president of the council of people's commissars (premier), Ivan Maisky, Russian ambassador to Great Britain, and interpreters.

With Litvinoff helping the interpreters and himself figuring importantly in the discussions, the British and Russians talked European and world affairs for an hour. It was said afterward Stalin displayed "great interest in world affairs."

Litvinoff and Eden conferred for

Baruch Warns Of Profit Grab In Time of War

Arms Must Be Produced, Despite Price Curb, He Tells Committee.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

As Bernard M. Baruch, former chairman of the War Industries Board, yesterday completed three days of testimony before the Nye munitions committee with a warning not to make taxes on profits so high it will hamper the prosecution of a war, the committee planned to meet in executive session Monday to discuss proposed neutrality legislation.

Senator Gerald P. Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, chairman of the committee, laid informally and privately before his colleagues tentative drafts of bills restricting foreign travel, trade and loans by Americans in case of war abroad. The measures will not be made public until the committee has a chance to consider them.

Meanwhile Senator Nye left for Lexington, Ky., to make an address tonight in which he will discuss the necessity for Congress adopting a neutrality policy at once. He also will discuss the work of his committee and its proposals for taking the profits out of war.

After an apparently tiresome day in which Mr. Baruch showed some impatience and some perplexity over the line of questioning followed by Alger Hiss, 32-year-old counsel for the committee, the New York financier reminded the committee to keep in mind that once the Nation became involved in war "the first and chief purpose should be to win it."

"I am willing to take part, with all my might, in any effort to break down prices," he asserted, "but we dare not go so far down that road as to stop production. That is an always present danger. You can not grab profits unless you first make munitions. In eliminating profits we must not eliminate munitions. We must not stop production.

"Let me say in all solemnity that there is such a thing as taking the profits out of war at the cost of losing the war by going too far. I

Poles Thunder Hymn of Hate Against Reich

Thousands in Border Mobs Protest School Closing, Storm Consulate.

By the Associated Press.

Katowice, Poland, March 29.—New-found "friendship" between Poland and Germany went by the boards today as anti-German demonstrations flared all along the German's eastern border.

Most violent demonstrations occurred at the Polish-German frontier, where thousands of Poles formed protest parades against Germany.

Police scattered one mob here just as it turned toward the German consulate.

Direct cause of the demonstrations here, it appeared, was the closing of the Polish high school in the nearby border town of Beuthen, an action that deprived it of the right to give final state examinations.

Some 5,000 persons, urged by their leader to get "revenge for the German impropriety" and "close the German schools in Poland," marched to the German newspaper Kattowitzer Zeitung and smashed windows of its building.

Singing the "Rota Song," the Polish hymn of hate for Germany, the mob next tackled police cordons hastily thrown around the German consulate, but was unable to break through.

Other demonstrations, less violent, occurred all along the border from Lithuania to Czechoslovakia.

A ten-year pact of friendship and nonaggression between Germany and Poland was signed January 26, 1934.

At the recent Anglo-German conversations in Berlin, Adolf Hitler was reported to have pointed to that agreement as evidence of the efficacy of bilateral pacts to safeguard peace.

Reports at Geneva recently said a secret clause in the German-Polish pact forbade either nation's adhering to the eastern security pact, which France and Russia so eagerly desire.

Strachey Embarks for Home As U. S. Drops Ouster Attempt

Evelyn John Strachey, the burly British author who has called himself "a Communist drummer peddling Maxism instead of pink pills," prepared quietly in New York to sail on the Cunard liner Berengaria for Southampton, England, last midnight.

Equally quietly, the Labor Department here announced it had dropped its efforts to speed his exit with a deportation order.

What looked like the beginning of a bitter fight over Communism and free speech had ended in a draw.

Strachey was leaving without carrying out his threat to fight deportation proceedings against him to a decision. He had been arrested on a deportation warrant in Glencoe, Ill., on March 12; a heated hearing had been held on March 21 and 22 in Chicago to determine whether he had advocated "overthrow of the United States Government by force or violence." His lawyers had said he would stay until the Labor Department decided whether or not to deport him, and if the department decided to deport him, he was to have taken the case to the courts.

Friends staged a farewell banquet for him and he told them he "hoped to come back."

"I'm naturally gratified that the Government has dropped deportation proceedings," he added. "I shall sail tonight on the Berengaria as I always had planned, my lecture tour having been completed at Boston last night. Nothing has happened here which qualifies the deep affection I have for America."

He had had a lucrative visit since December 25.

And in Washington, the following statement was issued over the

Annuities' Sale By U. S. Killed In Committee

Byrns, However, Keeps Compulsory Pension Plan in Security Bill.

By Douglas Warrenfels.

Opponents of Federal competition with private business yesterday killed a section of the Administration' economic security bill which would have permitted sale of annuities to workers earning more than $3,000 a year.

Meanwhile, Speaker Byrns exerted his influence with the House Ways and Means Committee in an apparently successful effort to block attempts of business men to have the measure shorn of provisions for a compulsory pension system involving heavy pay roll taxes.

Byrns stepped in to prevent a coalition of Democrats and Republicans on the committee from rejecting what the President's advisers regard as an integral and highly important part of the bill.

Byrns Averts Defeat.

Until the Speaker intervened, a close vote on elimination of the compulsory pension system was in prospect. While the issue has not yet been put to a vote all danger of an Administration defeat in committee has been averted.

The section in question would provide for pay roll taxes, beginning at 1 per cent and increasing later to 3 per cent on both employers and employes, or a total of 6 per cent. Persons earning more than $250 a month would not be taxed.

Workers now young could expect pensions of $100 a month when they reach 65. They would receive benefits on the basis of the amount they paid in to the fund. First pensions under this plan would be paid to persons who become 65 in about 1947.

It has been estimated that this fund, including interest, would total more than $50,000,000 after a period of years, and would provide the Federal Government with means of meeting its vast short-term loan requirements without paying interest to private bankers and others.

Annuities Plan Killed.

The committee vote on elimination of so-called voluntary annuities, to be bought and paid for by those benefiting, was 21 to 4. The action was a defeat for the Administration. Chairman Doughton voted with the minority.

Opponents of the voluntary annuities argued sale by the Government of such old-age benefits would injure the business of privately-owned insurance companies. They contended Uncle Sam would take business away from private companies because the Government's credit would be behind the annuities.

As originally drafted, the bill would have permitted anyone to be assured of a $50 a month income late in life by purchasing annuity certificates from the Treasury.

To Consider Townsendites.

Another week will elapse before the committee decides whether it will seek legislative procedure which would refuse advocates of the $200-a-month Townsend old-age pension plan an opportunity to offer amendments when the bill reaches the floor.

A special House rule would be required to gag the Townsend bloc. For a time such a rule seemed certain, but members who are against ironclad rules in principle were so outspoken that the ultimate outcome of the controversy became doubtful.

Doughton predicted the committee would not be able to submit the revised bill to the House before April 8 instead of April 1, as was contemplated last week.

Witness Defends Bank Committee

Denies Group Authorized $212,000 Detroit Loan.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, March 29.—Fred Brown, chairman of the officers loan committee of the closed First National Bank, Detroit, testified in Federal District Court today that the committee did not authorize the $212,000 loan which the Government charges three former officers of the bank with reporting falsely.

Brown, who is now assistant to the receiver of the bank, said he first learned of the transaction March 6, 1931, the day after it was made, and that he warned the committee that "the examiner will raise hell" about it.

John Ballantyne, Herbert L. Chittenden, and John H. Hart, are accused of making the loan to two junior officers of the bank to conceal from the Comptroller of the Currency a speculation with bank funds in stock of the Detroit Bankers Co., holding concern which controlled the First National.

The Government had not completed presentation of its case when court was adjourned until Tuesday.

Long Balks Action On Farley Report

He Threatens to 'Tear It Limb From Limb.'

By the Associated Press.

The Senate yesterday deferred action on the committee report opposing the Long resolution for an investigation of Postmaster General Farley's official conduct after the Louisiana Senator served notice he would "tear the report limb from limb" when he had an opportunity.

The Senate was working under a five-minute debate rule when the Postoffice Committee's report was reached.

"Just a minute, Mr. President," said Long, "it will take me longer than five minutes to discuss this matter and the committee chairman will need more than five minutes after I get through."

The issue was put off when Senator Logan (Democrat), Kentucky, objected to present consideration.

Between You and Me

A Wayward Comma Provides Works Bill Joker; The Nye Inquiry; Maverick Offers Alibi.

By Raymond Clapper

One little wild comma in the works bill has stirred up some commotion downtown among those who are expected to be in command of the new undertaking.

This comma landed in the wrong place and apparently has changed the meaning of the section regarding Senate confirmation of appointees under the bill. Seemingly it was the intention in Congress to require confirmation only of new officials, exempting those who had served under previous setups. However, the comma was placed carelessly so that, as the provision reads, literally, the exemption applies only to State or regional officials who have previously served and gives no exemption to the top men.

While that does not appear to have been the intent, some in the Administration are wondering what might happen once the text of the bill becomes law with the wandering comma standing at its present post. Some Tory in the Senate might arise and demand that Hopkins, Tugwell and others who may appear in the set-up run the gantlet of Senate confirmation.

That is just one of a number of careless things that have happened.

Another one is that they have discovered a joker in the conference report. A provision was slipped in after the bill passed the House and Senate requiring that one-third of money loaned to States and communities for self-liquidating projects be spent for labor. PWA records show that in slum clearance, grade-crossing work and rural electrification, the labor cost will amount to less than one-third. When this was discovered, suspicion developed at once that this could operate to check electrical projects. One of the conferees later admitted that one purpose of this provision was to prevent the money from being used by municipalities to buy existing electrical plants.

Secretary Ickes spotted that, and, although he has been left on the outside during the heavy brain work on the works-relief program, he volunteered to point out the joker before it became embalmed in law.

* * * *

There's still another one. The House leaders fumbled this time. They let the conference report be filed in the House. They were in such a rush to complete passage of the bill that they obtained special permission to file the conference report night before last after the House had quit. This was irregular, but the leaders thought it would save time.

However, what they have done is to take the bill out of reach of the conferees and make it impossible for them to sit down again and correct the instances of careless work just cited. Unless the House parliamentarians discover some new sleight-of-hand, they will have to let the House vote the bill up or down and then appoint conferees all over again to finish the job.

There seems to be no end. Washington has never seen a jinx like the one that has roosted on this works-relief bill.

In at least one respect the Senate munitions investigation is different. It is not a one-man show, as most other famous inquiries have been.

The Teapot Dome investigation was dominated by the late Senator Thomas Walsh of Montana, who glared out over his walrus moustaches. The late Senator Caraway, husband of the present Senator Caraway, was the central figure of the Senate lobby investigation a few years ago as he slashed at lobbyist witnesses with his double-edged tongue. Black, of Alabama, was most of the show in the airmail and ocean mail investigation a year ago. Former Senator James A. Reed took the country on a tour of Pennsylvania's political sewer system in the Vare investigation ten years ago. In the stock market investigation the midget who sat in J. P. Morgan's lap, was the chief rival of Ferdinand Pecora, now a justice of the New York State Supreme Court, who gained a national reputation.

No one man has monopolized the spotlight in the Senate munitions investigation, neither the chairman, Nye; chief investigator, Raushenbush, nor any single member. Nye, young and modest, has shared prominence during the investigation with other members—Clark, of Missouri; Pope, of Idaho; Bone, of Washington, and Vandenberg, of Michigan. Barbour, of New Jersey, has not been so prominent, due to a lesser degree of interest in the proceedings.

Active members of the committee have an agreement that they will discuss matters pertaining to the investigation thoroughly with each other before making them public. Nye refused to release copies of tentative neutrality legislation until other members had an opportunity to study them. In contrast, during the stock market investigation Senator Glass frequently protested that the inquiry was being run without informing members of the committee what was afoot. Frequently he was unable to assess the significance of evidence sought in the open hearings because he had not been advised previously as to what the committee investigators sought to show. During the investigation of the Morgans and others, the proceedings frequently halted while Glass protested that he was being kept in the dark by those conducting the inquiry.

Most Senators have all of the temperament of prima donnas and it frequently happens that when one member begins to steal the show, other members drop out and cease attending the hearings or assisting in any way.

A point of personal explanation is offered by Representative Maury Maverick, of Texas, recently reported at the State Department all dressed up and supporting a cane. The fact is that the cane was supporting Maverick, who recently had an operation. To head off pan mail from constituents, Representative Maverick has prepared an affidavit which says:

"Your deponent herein absolutely denies being dressed up like a dude, although he carried a cane in the State Department. Your deponent says, in explanation thereof, that the said cane was caused by a recent operation, from which he has now recovered; and that the said cane was to be used by ordinary cripples and not by dudes in the State Department. Your deponent further swears that he has never worn what is known as a 'morning coat,' various and sundry striped breeches, braid coats, or any other paraphernalia, flub-dub, or diplomatic habiliment; always dressing in an ordinary and simple manner, as befits a Congressman of the United States."

The story is that a Detroit tax assessor was responsible for the sticker in the pink slip repeal which gives State and local officers authority to inspect Federal income tax returns. They are under penalty not to make such information public.

The purpose of this, it is said, is to enable State and local officials to pick up the trail of hidden personal assets. Cities always have had trouble collecting taxes on personal property because they couldn't locate securities in safe boxes. Now they can go through the records of their branch internal revenue office and track down hidden assets, and take some of the load off of real estate, which, in most cases, can not be hidden in a vest pocket. Real property just has to stand out on the street and take it when the assessor comes around.

Ohio Hay Buyer Indicted in Quiz Of 'Shakedown'

John Lee Accused of Forgery in Probe Inspired by Harry Hopkins.

By the Associated Press.

Columbus, Ohio, March 29.—Federal Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins' charge of a corrupt alliance between relief administration and politics in Ohio brought an indictment against a former hay buyer for the State relief organization today.

It was disclosed that Dallas Dort, a special FERA investigator, came here late Thursday and returned to Washington after interviewing several officials on incidents growing out of Hopkins' controversy with Gov. Martin L. Davey.

Prosecuting Attorney Donald J. Hoskins, of Franklin County (Columbus), asserted the indictment "doesn't by any means end" the county grand jury's inquiry into Hopkins' charges of a political "shakedown" of firms selling to the State relief administration. Hopkins' assertion that funds were solicited from such firms for the purpose of paying off a deficit in the campaign of Gov. Davey caused the Governor to file a warrant charging criminal libel against the Federal relief administrator.

A joint legislative investigation of relief was in recess for the weekend as the indictment against John A. Lee, the hay buyer, was returned. It charges forgery, obtaining money under false pretense, and being interested in a public contract. Hoskins indicated he would issue a warrant for Lee's arrest.

The forgery charge alleged that Lee, suspended by C. C. Stillman, Hopkins' representative in charge of Ohio relief, placed the name of Earl Pyle, of Clarksville, Ohio, on a check for $1,439.55.

The charge of obtaining money under false pretense alleged Lee represented that he purchased ensilage from Pyle when, in fact, he obtained it from another source. Hoskins said $10,255.44 was involved in the alleged misrepresentation.

The charge of being interested in a public contract sets forth that Lee used Pyle in the purchase of ensilage, giving Pyle $1.50 a ton, retaining a similar sum himself, and billing the relief organization for $8.50 a ton for ensilage he bought for $4.50 a ton. Lee's affidavit said he used the $1 a ton withheld from Pyle to make up a part of the $3,000 he solicited and turned over to the Democratic State committee. Lee, the affidavit said, collected the funds of his own free will.

18 Freed in Attack On Rebel Venizelos

"Public Enemy No. 1' in Group Acquitted.

By the Associated Press.

Athens, March 29.—A Greek court tonight acquitted all prisoners charged with an attack on former Premier Eleutherios Venizelos, asserted leader of the recent revolt, in June, 1933.

Those released by the assize court included Bandit Chief Karathanassis, sometimes called Greece's "Public Enemy No. 1," and 17 other persons the prosecution charged conspired with him to attempt Venizelos' life.

The trial got under way February 21, a short time before the outbreak of the revolution which the government charged Venizelos headed.

Bay State Frustrates Convict 'Terror Reign'

Boston, March 29 (AP).—Arthur T. Lyman, commissioner of correction, late today revealed the frustration of a plot to deliver five desperate prisoners from the Norfolk prison colony and stage a reign of terror in which half a hundred banks and corporations in Massachusetts and elsewhere had been picked as prospective victims.

Chemical formulae for high explosives and photostatic copies of names and pay roll statistics of the corporations to be robbed were found, Lyman asserted, on the prisoners, who were immediately taken to State prison.

Good-Neighbor Policy Pursued By Roosevelt

Nation's First Fisherman Pulls Into Bahamas Off Cuban Coast.

By the Associated Press.

Miami, Fla., March 29.—President Roosevelt pulled into Man-o-War Bay of Great Inagua Island of the Bahama group late today on his fishing cruise.

This point is in British waters off the coast of Cuba and about 500 miles east of Miami, where the President maintained contact with the White House through temporary headquarters.

Aside from brief messages reporting changes in position Mr. Roosevelt reserved details of his fishing luck in the bright sunshine of the southern waters.

McIntyre Sees Key West.

Marvin H. McIntyre, secretary to the President, established at Miami headquarters, today flew with Assistant Secretary L. W. Robert, of the Treasury, and newspapermen to inspect the ambitious attempt of the Federal Emergency Relief Administration to rehabilitate Key West, Fla., on the southernmost tip of the United States.

McIntyre found the city, which was abandoned as a military post, considerably renovated and learned tourists during the past season had used all available space.

Julius F. Stone, jr., State relief administrator, believes there is a chance the FERA will more than break even on the experiment, for which $2,000,000 has been set aside by the Government.

Mr. Roosevelt, in his crusing expedition, is regarded by some as pointing an example to the war-threatened world of his "good neighbor" policy.

He has been in British waters for three days and just off the coast of the island republic of Cuba at a time, by coincidence, when the British are undertaking peace efforts on the European continent.

The President stopped first today at Mathew Town on Great Inagua Island, and after a morning of fishing off the yacht Nourmahal set out at 1:50 p. m. (Eastern standard time) for Man-o-War Bay, where he arrived at 3:50 p. m.

Landon Dodges Giving Position On Presidency

Kansas Governor, However, Says G.O.P. Prospects Appear Bright.

By the Associated Press.

Denver, March 29.—Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas, mentioned as a possible Republican presidential candidate in 1936, took refuge in smiling evasions when asked about his plans today.

In a brief meeting with newspapermen he declined to say whether he will be a candidate. He indicated he saw little or no significance in the party's "preconvention" meeting called for Kansas City in May. He said he thought G. O. P. prospects in 1936 are "excellent."

Asked if he would accept the assignment of carrying Republican hopes in the next election, Landon gave way to another chuckle and replied:

"George Washington, I think, was the only one of our Presidents ever in that position."

Denies New Alignments.

The preliminary meeting of Republicans of ten Western States was first announced on "Kansas Day," January 29, Landon said.

A few days ago in Washington Landon was quoted as saying the meeting would be called to "rehabilitate the party" for the coming campaign, draft a new declaration to the regular convention in 1936 and seek to shift party leadership from the East to the West.

He was quoted further as calling the plan a probable "trailblazer."

Today, however, he was far from voluble on the subject.

"The plan for this meeting is not brand new," Landon said. "It was first announced on Kansas day January 29. It does not represent a new alignment of the party or the setting up of a new group within the party.

Likes Kansas Prospects.

"It will be merely a meeting of national committeemen to talk over plans probably for next year's convention. There are no realignments, either old or new, in the Republican Party."

It was then he added that he regarded the party's chances in 1936 as "excellent."

"This is especially true in Kansas," he said smilingly. Landon defied Democratic avalanches in 1932 and 1934 to gain the Governor's chair in Kansas.

The Governor said his recent trip to Washington was to obtain funds for soil erosion work and he obtained $250,000 from the FERA. He said "listing" the soil—plowing it and leaving the ground in large lumps—appears the most feasible way of fighting wind destruction.

Questioned about proposed supplemental shelter belts, he said: "I guess they would be of value."

Landon came here to speak before Denver alumni of Baker University of Baldwin, Kans., of which he is a trustee. He was to address a Methodist meeting at Greeley tonight.

Author Unfolds Story of Woe With First Wife

H. Bedford-Jones Seeks to Aid Present Mate in Alienation Suit.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 29.—H. Bedford Jones, author of many a stirring magazine romance, today unfolded a tale of an unhappy married life with wife number one from the witness stand in Federal court.

His testimony was designed to aid his present mate, Mrs. Mary Bernadin Bedford-Jones, in the $200,000 alienation of affections suit brought against her by his first spouse, Mrs. Helen Bedford-Jones.

The writer, nattily attired in gray tweeds, described the plaintiff as a nagging, jealous woman with a fondness for drink and a penchant for quarreling. He contended his first wife's harping drove him "almost frantic" and added:

"Once I actually started to take my life.

Planned to Kill Self.

"I finally realized I would have to do my duty. I took out plenty of life insurance because the only thing I could see to do was to kill myself.

"I made all the preparations. But just as I started, I thought there might be some chance of getting along if we went back to Evansville, where she would be among friends.

"Unfortunately, I made the mistake later of telling her about this. That gave her a new angle. I was 'utterly insane.'"

Then he etched a later scene in these words:

"It took her three days to recite my evil deeds. Before that, she's been able to do it in two. Life was terrible for all of us. The poor kids had a hard time."

Divorced in 1929.

The author found a solution for his marital troubles on Christmas night, 1928, when he left his Evansville, Ind., home, his first wife and their three children. He was divorced the following year and then married the former Mrs. Mary Bernadin, widow of an Evansville manufacturer. His three children later joined the writer and his second spouse in California and one of them, 20-year-old Helen, appeared as a defense witness today.

Bedford-Jones, tall and handsome, was still in the box when court adjourned until Monday. Both wives watched him closely.

The author's recital covered life in Evansville and Ann Arbor and trips abroad. He claimed Mrs. Bernadin had made no unseemly overtures in his direction in the period immediately prior to his departure from home.

Strachey Embarks, U. S. Drops Ouster

name of Daniel W. MacCormack, commissioner of immigration, who had charged Strachey with false and misleading statements to the American consul in London:

"The deportation proceedings against Mr. John Strachey conducted at the hearing in Chicago on March 21 are being dropped. Mr. Strachey will sail on the Berengaria on March 29 as originally planned.

"The United States is ordinarily willing to drop proceedings prior to the issuance of a warrant of deportation in cases in which the alien leaves the country."

Col. MacCormack was in Philadelphia last night and could not be reached to amplify the statement.

The Labor Department avoided an "absurd situation" by dropping the case, Arthur Garfield Hays and Roger N. Baldwin, of the American Civil Liberties Union, Strachey's chief defender in the controversy, said in a statement to the Associated Press in New York last night.

"If the department had rendered a decision against him, he might have had to stay in the country a year to find out whether he could be put out," they said. "It would take that time to go through all the courts."

Dana Defends Strachey, Raps Deportation Threat

By the United Press.

Cambridge, Mass., March 29. — John Strachey's American prototype, Dr. Henry Wadsworth Longfellow Dana, tonight defended, from a practical standpoint, the English writer and lecturer's position in espousing the cause of Communism intellectually, while remaining outside the party fold.

The grandson of the poet Longfellow also charged that deportation of Strachey would be not only un-American but "the result of a stupid misunderstanding and deliberate misrepresentation of what Communism really is."

"People fail to realize," Dana said, "that the Communist Party has a legal standing in American politics. Ballots are legally printed at every election for Republicans, Democrats, Socialists and Communists. In my opinion it is just as ridiculous to haul Strachey before the courts under suspicion of being a Communist, which he denies, as it would be to make a fuss because someone else was a Republican or a Democrat."

Member, like Strachey, of a famous literary family, Dana is a grandson both of Longfellow and of Richard Henry Dana, author of "Two Years Before the Mast."

Alagna Found Overcome In Gas-Filled Kitchen

New York, March 29 (AP).—George Alagna, 28-year-old wireless operator of the burned liner Morro Castle, whose testimony in the subsequent inquiry excited controversy, was removed to Bellevue Hospital today from the gas-filled kitchen of his Jackson Heights apartment.

Alagna declined to talk. He is said to have been morose over his unemployment since the investigation of the Morro Castle disaster last fall. A partly finished note was found but police refused to disclose its contents.

Chief Justice Wheat Defends District Courts As House Committee Concludes Hearings every time there is a real need for its efficient operation."

"In Baltimore," Mr. Hepbron told the committee, "we are trying between 80 and 90 per cent of all cases within three weeks of the date of arrest. There are few appeals. Possibly that's because unless there is a good reason for an appeal decisions are not reversed."

"We," said Justice Wheat, "now are hearing criminal cases within a month of indictment. I don't believe there is any place in the country with a record like that. Our equity cases are a little behind. We are trying to bring them up to date by assignment of an additional judge beginning next month."

Parole Law Attacked.

The committee counsel asked whether it might not be wise to have the court make a rule requiring all cases not presented within 30 days of indictment brought into open court for decision on the question of further postponement of actual trial. Justice Wheat said a court rule might be all right, but he did not believe legislation was necessary.

Repeal of the present indeterminate sentence law and the District parole law was urged by Justice Wheat.

"We don't approve it," he said of the indeterminate sentence law on behalf of his associates. "This law really robs the judge of discretion in imposing sentence. Sentencing a criminal is a difficult thing to do. Punishment of a criminal requires consideration of three things: First, as punitive; second, as a deterrent, and third, as an example to the community.

"When some heinous crime is committed, for which a maximum penalty of 15 years is provided, we must, under the indeterminate sentence law, impose a sentence ranging from 3 to 15 years. A 3-year sentence, in the particular instance, may not be exemplary punishment.

"We think the system in effect prior to enactment of the indeterminate sentence law is the proper one. Allow the judge to give the sentence he thinks the proper one and then the prisoner would become eligible for parole at one-third of the sentence."

Opposes Local Board.

Justice Wheat disapproved of a parole law administered by a "local board." He said parole of District prisoners should be turned over to the Federal parole board. He disapproved of the local law making prisoners eligible for parole after serving one-fifth of their maximum sentences. The Federal law provides for parole after one-third the sentence is served.

Blunt disagreement was expressed by the Chief Justice with previous testimony about the many and unnecessary existing restrictions on eligibility for jury duty in the Capital.

"The only change you might make in the statutory restrictions," Mr. Wheat said, "might be to eliminate the requirement that a person must be a resident of the District to serve on a jury here. I can't quite see why anybody who actually inhabits the District, does business here, shouldn't serve on a jury even if he does vote in Maryland, or Virginia, or perhaps in Ohio.

"I doubt very much if it would be advisable to alter the schedule of exemptions which has been drafted by the court in view of past decisions and experience. Some of these exemptions are based on opinions which have been approved by the Court of Appeals and some have even been taken to the United States Supreme Court.

Asks Firm Prosecutor.

"As I have said, there is no necessity for making a change. We have no difficulties in getting juries."

"What," asked Representative Chauncey W. Reed, of Illinois, "would you think of a law requiring the defense to give ample notice to the prosecution of intent to plead an alibi or insanity?"

"That would depend on how often that happened. What's the sense of cluttering up the statute books with a law about that if it doesn't happen often? The best way is to have competent administration of the District attorney's office. The District attorney should be a competent and high-minded public official. He takes an oath of office as sacred as that which I take. He should have a pretty free hand."

During 1934, Justice Wheat said, the number of criminal cases on which prosecution started was 1,244. The number terminated was 1,166. Verdicts of guilty were returned in 166 cases. Pleas of guilty were accepted in 755 cases. In 49 cases there were acquittals.

"That doesn't indicate any breakdown, does it?" the justice asked.

Backs Safety Director.

Creation of the office of a director of public safety was urged by Mr. Roberts. The commissioner would be appointed by the District Commissioners and preference would be given to District residents, he said. Selection, however, would not be limited to District residents. The Commissioners would be authorized to remove the director.

Under the director would be grouped the police department, the fire department, and those other municipal agencies having to do with law enforcement, such as the building inspector, electrical inspector, fire marshal, elevator inspector and others.

"Any plan to prevent crime," Mr. Roberts said, "must go back of the police department."

"Do you," asked Mr. Fitzpatrick, "favor merging of the Park police and the Metropolitan police?"

Favors Police Merger.

"Absolutely. The public has come to believe, however, that these two are the only two police forces in the District. They are not. Something should be done to reduce the multitudinous police forces here. There's the Metropolitan, the Park, the Capitol, the Capitol Grounds, the White House, the Soldiers' Home, the Agriculture Department, the Zoological Gardens, police forces, all of which are constituted in law.

"This committee should get rid of the conflict of jurisdictions which are silly and unnecessary.

"A fundamental reorganization is necessary if you ever are going to get efficient policing."

For Joint Committee.

Reorganization of congressional machinery for handling District affairs was proposed by the people's counsel. There should be appointed, by joint action of the House and Senate, he said, a joint District committee. That joint committee would handle both District legislation and District appropriations. At present both the House and Senate have District committees which pass on District legislation, and each has a different appropriations sub-committee. The latter, Mr. Roberts said, could, and often does, stultify the former by refusing to appropriate funds for enforcement of legislation, and, in addition, employs the appropriation bill as a vehicle for special legislation of their own designing.

"That is a very important statement which I never have heard expressed so," Representative Jennings Randolph, of West Virginia, committee chairman, said.

Turning to the prosecution of cases in the District courts, Mr. Roberts gave the committee a rapid-fire account of the historical background of the present organization which finds both the corporation counsel of the District and the United States attorney for this territory prosecuting both criminal and civil cases.

"The logical agent to conduct prosecution of offenses against the District of Columbia would be the corporation counsel. The District attorney would prosecute cases against the laws of the United States. There is an overlapping there which should be eliminated."

Hits Inefficient Set-up.

"Is there," asked Mr. Fitzpatrick, "any relationship between the District attorney and the District Commissioners?"

"None. The relationship at best is very indirect. It really is astonishing that the inefficient arrangement which has existed so long supported on little more than air should have worked as efficiently as it has."

The parole board, Mr. Roberts said, had been recklessly criticized by men who should have known better.

"You can't," he said, "have a parole system administered by three volunteers. You've got to have a full-time board. Either abandon the District of Columbia board and go under the Federal Parole Board or spend the money necessary to provide a full-time District board and provide that board with an adequate staff."

Some of the estimates for a parole staff, he said, were exorbitant.

The board should be required to use such municipal facilities as Gallinger Hospital, he said. In the hospital, he continued, the District has the nucleus of one of the finest municipal hospitals in the country although the hospital head and his staff were now overworked and otherwise handicapped. There should be provided enough parole officers so that none had more than 40 paroles to supervise, he said.

Garnett's Office Criticized.

Sharp criticism of the United States attorney's office was voiced by the people's counsel in telling of a recent case in which a veteran clerk in the water department had been arrested on a charge of having taken $15 in return for a receipt absolving the giver of the payment of $40 penalties on his water bill.

"The District attorney's office," he complained, "couldn't find a charge to place against the man. They suggested embezzlement, false pretenses. I suggested graft, under the old common law."

"The common law covering graft is operative here, isn't it?" suggested Mr. Fitzpatrick.

"It is. But the man finally was indicted for soliciting, a felony. There should be put in our law a clear graft law. Not that punishment of this poor little clerk, who had been employed for 30 years, is important.

Asks Small Claims Court.

"This is indicative. Our whole code from beginning to end is obsolete. Unquestionably Congress should pass the pending measure providing for codification and revision of our criminal statutes. Provision should be made for the employment of a thoroughly competent person to rewrite them and submit the revision to Congress."

Establishment of a genuine small claims court was urged by Mr. Roberts. The present Municipal Court, he said, did not meet the need. He said hundreds of poor persons were in difficulties monthly with "professional" landlords.

"There are," he charged, "many unscrupulous persons who are taking advantage of the depression and unemployment and employing persons at meager wages. When pay day comes around the employer says he will only pay the employe a part of his wages. After two or three weeks he tells the employe, 'Get the hell out of here, you're no good.' What redress has the employe?

"I'm now drafting a statute which I hope will help meet this situation. California and New York have statutes making it a criminal offense to withhold wages.

"I'm only supposed, in my official capacity, to deal with public utilities questions. Under pressure of the pleas of such poor persons I have done something I think is wrong in principle. I'm conducting what amounts to a small claims court without authority in law or power to enforce my judgments. I simply call in the restaurant or other employer and the complaining employe and try to get them to come to an agreement and settle up."

Would Revise System.

Approval of some form of magistrate courts, such as suggested by E. Barrett Prettyman, corporation counsel, before the committee, was voiced by Mr. Roberts.

"I agree absolutely with Barrett Prettyman that we should decentralize the prosecution of minor offenses," Mr. Roberts said.

Judge Gus A. Schuldt, presiding judge of the Police Court, took the opposite view. Judge Schuldt said that the court was the only one of which he knew in the country which sat every day of the year, including Christmas, July 4 and other holidays, except Sundays.

"I have heard some suggestions about magistrate courts," he said, in response to questions. "I have talked with several lawyers and others about it. It seems the universal opinion among lawyers that such a plan is not practicable. I believe an additional police court judge, with adequate facilities, could handle the work."

A. J. Driscoll, president of the Midcity Citizens Association, urged restoration of the old Second Police Precinct. Combination of the old No. 2 and No. 8 Precincts, he said, had made for unwieldiness and inefficient operation and administration.

Statement of Randolph.

The committee, Representative Randolph said, intended to press toward completion of its report.

He made public a brief statement which follows:

"The hearing this afternoon concludes the formal hearings of the special committee investigating crime conditions in the District of Columbia. The committee will now proceed with the task of carefully examining all of the evidence, testimony, the ideas and recommendations which it has gathered during its two months of investigation. It is the purpose of the committee to complete its study of the evidence and other material and draft its report for submission to Congress at the earliest possible date.

"It seems appropriate at this time to express the gratitude of the committee for the splendid co-operation it has received from officials, citizens and the newspapers of the District of Columbia. The assistance thus rendered has in effect been a valuable contribution to the well-being of the Capital of the Nation."

Labor Periled By 30-Hr. Bill, Insists Austin

Senator's Minority Report Says Wrong Way Taken to Recovery.

Return to normal profit and business expansion, through increased production and lower prices, was asked yesterday in a minority report against the Black 30-hour week bill, filed by Senator Warren R. Austin (Republican), Vermont.

Senator Austin, who cast his vote against the bill when it was favorably reported by the Senate Judiciary Committee, declared it would mean "more rather than less unemployment, less rather than more real wages, and in the long run longer rather than shorter hours for many people, and a lower, not a higher, standard of living for all."

The Black bill, providing a five-day week and a six-hour day for all industries doing an interstate business, is now pending on the Senate calendar.

Calls Bill Inconsistent.

Austin declared the bill "wholly inconsistent with the democracy of labor and the right of bargaining, collectively or otherwise."

He urged abandonment by industry of the search for profit by way of less production, and abandonment by labor of the wage and hour policies outlined in the bill. He said the short week proposal could only operate to retard recovery.

Among the remedies suggested by the Vermonter were:

"Acceptance by business of overtime wage policies which will distribute an increased sum in wages as the demand for workers rises above the level of the 40-hour week.

Sees Farmer Endangered.

"Active protection of true business profit by Government for the sake of reemployment, increased pay rolls and increased governmental income.

"Confining repressive measures to the limiting of profit from speculative inflation, which destroys purchasing power, produces unemployment and generates an unendurable burden of debt."

He said the Black bill would ask the farmer, finding it difficult to make a living on 60 hours a week, to support the industrial worker on 30 hours a week.

The newspaper industry, he said, would be plunged into "a chaos from which it would require years to recover." Austin argued that smaller and poorer newspapers would result, "with closing their office doors their only alternative."

water. The parks office announced yesterday that the rainbow fountain of Lincoln Memorial pool will be turned on at 10 a. m. tomorrow. So will the cascades in Meridian Hill Park, Newlands fountain at Chevy Chase Circle and the pansy bed fountain in West Potomac Park.

Meanwhile the single blossoms were gradually emerging from their buds yesterday, hastened by warm weather. It is expected that most of the trees will be in full bloom tomorrow, when an estimated throng of 100,000 will come to view them.

Meanwhile a gloomy outlook was predicted by the weatherman, who saw a cold wave reaching eastward. Today will be cloudy and warmer, but tomorrow occasional rain will fall, with colder temperatures in the afternoon and much colder weather at night.

Suing Bus Company, Woman Asks $35,000

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Uniontown, Pa., March 29.—A Washington woman, Miss Elizabeth Moss, filed suit for $35,000 damages against the Blue Ridge Transportation Co. here yesterday.

She said she had been a passenger on a company bus on October 24, 1933, from Washington to Uniontown, and that she fell at the 6-inch drop in front of the door of the washroom. Injuries incapacitated her from then until April 25, 1934, she asserted.

Bandits in Jail, Couple Relieved After Exciting Ride as Hostages

Wife Describes Bank Holdups 'Nightmare' Flight to Chicago.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 29.—Now that the three young gunmen who paid $2 for a profitless raid on a Mauston, Wis., bank Wednesday are locked up, the two hostages they kidnaped for a hair-raising dash to Chicago are willing to talk about it.

Thoroughly shaken by the grim experience, Mrs. Birdie Brode told the story of the "nightmare ride" at her husband's side, with three robbers in their speeding car.

It had taken the police longer to find the kidnaped couple in their hotel here than to round up the three robbers who commandeered the Brode car near Janesville, Wis., late Wednesday.

Michael Monczynski, Edward Cudecki and Thomas Stopa had been dragged from packing boxes and clothes heaps in their Chicago homes last night, tagged for Wisconsin justice and, waiving extradition, held by the State's attorney for removal. After that, Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Brode turned up safe at their hotel.

"We were returning from Duluth and Minneapolis when they caught up with us, Mrs. Brode related.

"We were between Janesville and Madison. It was snowing hard and the windshield had become coated. Ellis slowed down, intending to stop and clean it off. Just then a car swung in, scraping our fender and forcing Ellis to stop quickly.

"I thought maybe the other car had skidded, but then I saw the rifle. A holdup, I thought, and wondered how I could save my wedding ring."

The gunmen had seized three other cars previously in their flight from Mauston, where they had laid a $2 bill on the counter as a prelude to robbing the bank, then fled in front of a cashier's bullets.

"'We want to use your car,'" Mrs. Brode quoted one robber. "'Get in back, both of you, and quick about it.'

"What a ride! At one time I glanced at the speedometer. It read 87 miles an hour—and on a snowy road.

"The three were quite polite, considering. As we raced along I looked at them. All were young, and not bad-looking boys."

Prosaic Onion Now Rum Runners' Cargo

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, March 30.—Rum runners, whose once flourishing business along the Great Lakes was scuttled by repeal, have a new racket now — they're smuggling onions.

Customs patrol boats again are scouring the lakes and the Detroit River to take up pursuit of furtive craft seeking to dash across from the Canadian side, loaded heavily with sacked onions instead of whisky as in former years.

During the last two months several boats have been confiscated and several loads of onions seized, Walter S. Petty, acting collector of customs here, said today. It's all a matter of price, he explained. The smugglers can buy onions for a cent a pound in Canada and sell them for 5 or 6 cents here.

Boots, nosed out of third place in the stretch.

While excited employes gathered about a radio listening to a description of the race, Cunningham sat in his office in an engraving company at 930 H street northwest, where he is an official, working.

"I was figuring," he said, "figuring on how I could get some more business."

Cunningham also figured he had won about $4,200 on the sweepstakes, $3,975 as holder of a ticket on a horse, and the balance as a bonus because the horse finished.

Other Winners Here.

Other Washington winners were: Eli Wiley Gaffield, 921 E street southeast, holder of a $40,000 residual prize ticket; M. Charles Dorsey, 1338 Meridian place, and Paul Wade, Shoreham Hotel chef, each of whom won $3,975 as holders of tickets on entries.

So far as was known last night Washington's most Irish guest didn't win anything. But the Rt. Hon. Alderman Alfred Byrne, lord mayor of Dublin, was pretty excited.

Just before the race he talked to a reporter. He said he would give him a worth-while tip. He forecast results in the race about to be run. The race was run and the mayor was right.

"Anyone with half an eye could see that Reynoldstown would win," he remarked, grinning.

Four Americans, the Associated Press reported, won a total of $570,000 as holders of tickets on the winner, Reynoldstown. The tickets were made out to:

Ray Gold, the Bronx, New York; Ann Goldberg, Philadelphia; Mabel Leitzelman, Olney, Ill., and "Five Glasses," 1321 North Manaker street, Philadelphia.

Winners on Blue Prince.

The following five won about $71,250 each as holders of tickets on Blue Prince, second horse:

A. D. Weiss, Bronx; Mae E. Smyle, Ozone Park, Long Island; Carmelo Ursino, Brooklyn; "May 15th," 875 Main street, Bridgeport, Conn., and "Susie," 4175 Oakwood avenue, Los Angeles.

Three American tickets were on Thomond II, the third-place horse. Each ticket pays approximately $47,500. The holders were:

J. Thomas Roszki, New York; "Clear Sailing," 37 Gouverneur street, New York, and "Erin Go Bragh," 96 Sixteenth street, Buffalo.

American Prize Money.

The Associated Press calculated total prize money destined for Americans yesterday as follows:

Four first prizes, $143,475 each, $573,900.

Eight seconds and thirds, $500,000.

Two hundred seventy-four tickets on non-placing horses, $846,000.

Residual prizes previously announced brought the winnings for Americans to about $2,664,000.

Sweepstakes news of a different sort came from Troy, N. Y., the press service continued. With the arrest of W. S. Fitzgerald, charged with sending tickets through the mails, a fake lottery ticket ring of nation-wide proportions was disclosed, Postal Inspector F. R. Mayer asserted. He said the ring had flooded the country with tickets on sweepstakes that were never run.

Death for Boys Refused.

Matanzas, Cuba, March 29 (AP).—Crescencio and Cecilreco Rodriguez, aged 9 and 5, respectively, were put on trial charged with setting fire to cane fields today and the prosecutor asked death sentences for them. When their ages were established the court ruled out the case because of their youth.

McMillan, Explorer, Wedded to Secretary

Paterson, N. J., March 29 (AP).—Commander Donald B. McMillan, Arctic explorer, announced tonight his secret marriage to his secretary, Miss Miriam Look, of Boston.

Commander McMillan, who made his first trip to the North with Admiral Peary on the exploration that resulted in the discovery of the North Pole 27 years ago, said the marriage climaxed a romance of several years. He said they were married "in February and near St. Augustine, Fla.

Belgian Action Viewed by U. S. With Approval

But Revaluation of Franc Seen Step Needed to End Money Ills.

By Elliott Thurston.

While avoiding all comment which might displease France, Administration authorities nevertheless regard the Belgian devaluation of the belga by 25 per cent as another important step toward ultimate solution of the world's currency muddle.

The Administration view seems to be that until the gold bloc, including France, revalues, no practical progress toward solution is possible. The opinion held among some monetary authorities is that the Belgian action is a forerunner—by how long in terms of weeks or months no one ventures to predict—of French revaluation which, in turn, would open the way for practical moves designed to steady the dollar, pound sterling and French franc in exchange.

Some New Dealers did not fail to note, with evident satisfaction that the new Belgian Premier, Paul van Zeeland, had taken a leaf out of the New Deal book not only in devaluing, but in proposing a program including large public works schemes, guarantee of bank deposits and recognition of Russia.

France Due to Leave Gold.

So many possibilities exist that monetary economists do not undertake to say assuredly that France will be forced to devaluation, and if so when, or what the longer range effects would be. However, the prevailing opinion is that the French can not indefinitely hold to their gold bullion standard under the deflationary pressures which are increased by the Belgian action.

One view is that such temporary trade advantages as flow to nations immediately upon devaluation may lead to demands for offsetting declines of competing currencies. At least it is recognized that the first effect is to arouse those pressures, exemplified by the Committee for the Nation on this side of the water, which may be expected to clamor for more devaluation to offset what the Belgians, French or British do. Analagous pressures are almost sure to arise in each country. However, this becomes currency warfare in which nobody gains in the end.

Another view is that, if these pressures are resisted, the way will be open for at least de facto "stabilization," without fixing permanent parities or gold content of currencies. And this, in turn, would tend to re-establish that degree of confidence in the stability of exchange rates without which world trade expansion can not be hoped for. Such tariff bargaining treaties as have been worked out, as between this country and Belgium, are contingent upon exchange stability.

Managed Currency Predicted.

More and more the opinion prevails here that the world is moving away from gold, and that its future will be far different from the past under semi-automatic gold standards. Many believe that an era of managed paper currencies is at hand, when and if the French go off gold, and that in the end gold will move chiefly among central banks in settlement of international balances.

A first result of the expected Belgian action was an accelerated inflow of foreign balances, which tends to send the dollar up. It is not believed that the Treasury's $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund is being used in an attempt to counteract this movement.

Secretary of State Hull said at a press conference yesterday that he did not believe the Belgian devaluation would prove detrimental to the newly-concluded Belgian-American reciprocal trade agreement, and that he considered the 25 per cent devaluation of the belga as moderate enough not to endanger the competitive situation so far as the United States is concerned.

Date for Agreement.

The agreement takes effect 30 days after it is proclaimed by President Roosevelt and officially published in Belgium. Notwithstanding the devaluation, of which this Government was forewarned, the plan is to proclaim the agreement on April 1 to take effect May 1. Either government may end it on six months' notice.

Secretary Hull disclosed that he had inserted in the agreement a protective or "escape" clause so that if the present devaluation of the belga does put American producers at a competitive disadvantage the agreement can be reopened and modified. The escape clause reads:

"In the event that a wide variation occurs in the rate of exchange between the currencies of the United States of America and the Belge-Luxemburg Economic Union, the Government of either country, if it considers the variation so substantial as to prejudice the industries or commerce of the country, shall be free to propose negotiations for the modification of this agreement or to terminate it on 30 days' written notice."

To Watch Situation.

Secretary Hull added that the situation would be closely watched and this clause invoked if necessary.

Belgian exports to the United States in 1933, the Associated Press cited, were $23,163,000, of which $6,696,000 was in diamonds, $5,491,000 in flax, hemp, ramie and their manufactures. Other imports from Belgium included undressed furs, potash, structural iron and steel, leather gloves, glass, cotton tapestries, cement and cobalt.

Farmer Finds 'Roots,' Find They're Snakes

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., March 29.—Enos C. Seibert, Clearspring farmer, thought he had found a new kind of root while changing the course of a stream on his farm, until the roots began to squirm. He discovered that the roots were a family of water snakes, 53 in number, which he soon killed. The snakes measured from 6 to 27 inches long and were matted together like many roots.

Automobile and Mining Officials Before Senate Labor Committee

With threats of a walkout hovering over the automobile, coal and other industries, the Senate Labor Committee session was center of attention. Attending were, from the left, B. E. Hutchinson, of Chrysler Motors, and Alfred P. Sloan, jr., president of General Motors; Donald A. Callahan, representing the American Mining Congress and the Callahan Lead and Zinc Corporation, of Wallace, Idaho, with R. C. Allen, president of Lake Superior Coal Association, Cleveland; A. J. Brosseau, president of Mack Truck and vice president of Automobile Manufacturers Association, and Alvin Macauley, president of Packard and president of Automobiles Manufacturers Association.

Automobile Labor Board, would resign. These reports were denied by Wolman at Detroit, according to the Associated Press. Wolman has been under fire of the American Federation of Labor.

Referring to strike threats in the coal, automobile, rubber and textile industries, Chairman Connery of the House Labor Committee declared that if the 30-hour week bill had been enacted at the last session of Congress the trouble would have been avoided. He said the present bill is being smothered.

If the present condition continues, he said, Governors will be calling out National Guardsmen as they did in the textile strike last year.

Robert C. Graham, vice president of Graham-Paige Motors Corporation, told the Senate Labor committee that enactment of the Wagner labor disputes bill would result in an immediate drive by the American Federation of Labor to make itself "czar" over workers of the country.

Others appearing against the bill included Donald A. Callahan, president of the Callahan Zinc-Lead Co.; R. C. Wallace, president of the Lake Superior Coal Association, and Eugene McAuliffe, president of the Union Pacific Coal Co.

Akron Bolsters Police For Rubber Strike Vote

By the Associated Press.

Akron, Ohio, March 29.—City and county officials increased special precautionary measures tonight as several thousand Akron rubber workers prepared to take strike votes.

Sheriff James Flower said he has bolstered his forces by appointing 400 men special deputies. Police Chief Frank Boss said the police department also would add special deputies if necessary. The sheriff was authorized recently by the county commissioners to buy $1,000 worth of tear gas bombs.

Officials of Goodyear Tire & Rubber and Goodrich Rubber asserted today a majority of their employes have shown by votes they are not in favor of a walkout.

Leaders of the Rubber Workers Union, an American Federation of Labor affiliate, went ahead however, with plans to conduct strike votes at Goodyear, Goodrich and the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co.

These three firms employ an estimated total of 35,000 workmen, of whom the union claims 12,000 as members. Company officials, however, say the union's membership claims are overstated.

Goodyear officials said that in a vote taken yesterday, 11,516 employes signified opposition to a strike and 891 were in favor. Goodrich officials said 6,019 employes replied "Yes," and 2,015 "No" on ballots asking "Would you remain at work in event of a strike?"

By the Associated Press.

Norton, Va., March 29.—A feeling persisted here today that a walkout would occur in the coal field of southwest Virginia Monday when the present wage agreement expires.

Neither operators nor miners were encouraged over prospects that a parley in Washington would effect an agreement in time to prevent a shutdown. Observers here said that neither side is likely to make any concessions until Congress has acted on the Guffey and Wagner bills now pending.

The mines have been increasing production greatly in the past few weeks as large buyers stocked up against a shutdown or a rise in prices. Miners are reported buying necessities cautiously in an effort to build up reserve funds.

Wife's Heels Propel Cattleman to Jail

By the Associated Press.

Denver, March 29.—The heels on his wife's shoes landed John B. Green, New Mexico cattleman, in jail today.

"I'm afraid he's going to shoot the heels off my shoes again," Patrolman Ray Fell said Mrs. Green confided as she asked her husband's arrest.

"He gets that idea sometimes. I'm not afraid for myself for he's a wonderful shot. But I don't want my shoes ruined."

Patrolman Fell testified Green had been drinking. A municipal judge fined him $10 and committed him to jail until his interest in heels waned.

Parliament is scheduled to sit in continuous session until the program is voted on.

Antidevaluationists in the chamber asserted that depreciation would permit the United States to change the Belgo-American trade agreement reached between the two countries a short time ago. The agreement involves reciprocal tariffs.

The United States figured prominently in another part of the debate when Finance Minister Gerard agreed to a Senate proposal that Belgium pay in gold all interest due during 1934 on stamped bonds of Belgian loans in the United States.

Gold Bloc Prepares To Fight for Life

By the United Press.

Paris, March 29.—The European gold bloc consolidated its forces tonight to prevent a break-up threatened by Belgium's fall from the gold standard.

Announcement was made in Paris that Belgium's desertion from the gold bloc does not affect France's position on the gold standard, but nervousness was reflected in preparations by the finance commission of the Chamber of Deputies to hear Finance Minister Germain-Martin outline the country's monetary situation in view of events across the northern border.

Supreme confidence of Holland's ability to stick to the gold standard was expressed in Amsterdam dispatches.

Italian officials announced Italy's financial policy will remain unchanged on a gold basis.

In Switzerland gilt-edged bonds dropped 1 per cent on the Zurich Stock Exchange in heavy selling traced mostly to Paris sources. Bankers expressed belief the Belgian crisis would subside by Monday.

Some Paris financial sources saw in Belgium's action possibility of an early international currency stabilization conference, which France would welcome, but stressed that Great Britain first must show a change of recent attitude toward such a meeting.

Meanwhile, further huge gold movements from Paris were reported, laid to the transfer by gold bloc capitalists of their holdings into sterling, but the flow was offset by receipt at the Bank of France of gold in flight from Belgium and some £20,000,000 metal from London for use of the British stabilization fund if needed.

Barbara Wings Toward Reno To Sue Prince

Heiress Leaves Newark on Chartered Plane; Mother With Her.

By the Associated Press.

Newark, N. J., March 29.—Barbara Hutton was flying out to Reno tonight for a divorce from her Georgia prince, Alexis Mdivani.

The heiress to the Woolworth millions, who arrived at New York yesterday aboard the liner Bremen, slipped quitely out of Newark Airport at 3:21 p. m. (Eastern standard time) today on a chartered plane. Her first scheduled stop was Cleveland, where she was due to arrive at 7 p. m.

Frank McMillan, a regular United Air Lines pilot, was at the controls when the ship took off. With the princess, it was learned, was her mother, Mrs. Franklyn Hutton, and her lawyer, Millard Tompkins, jr.

Two transport ships of the United Air Lines were on the line in front of the passenger station, waiting for the 4 o'clock take-off when the Hutton party arrived at the airport in an automobile.

Another ship was standing some distance away, its propeller slowly turning over. The princess and the others climbed aboard and the ship took off.

France Rushes Colonial Units To Rhine Forts

Reinforces Army Guarding Border; Titulescu Holds Parley With Laval.

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

Paris, March 29.—France, still anxious over German rearmament, has rushed colonial troop reinforcements to the Rhineland frontier against the rising threat of war.

Colonial army units already in this country were being strengthened tonight, and many of them were in areas close to the German border, reinforcing regiments removed from the Italian frontier, to answer Adolf Hitler's threat.

The colonial contingents include Moroccans, Algerians, Madagascans and Indo-Chinese. Their strengths include:

A Madagascan battalion of machine gunners at Pamiers.

A battalion of Indo-Chinese at Carcassone.

The Second Colonial Infantry from Africa, at Brest.

Large forces of native Moroccan and Algerian troops at Toul, great military depot, 50 miles from the German "front."

Titulescu Arrives.

Word of these preparations coincided with arrival of Nicholas Titulescu, Rumanian foreign minister and spokesman for the Little Entente nations—Rumania, Jugoslavia and Czechoslovakia. He immediately opened conversations with Foreign Minister Pierre Laval on the German situation and the series of peace talks among the former allies and their supporters designed to check the Nazi program.

Titulescu reportedly informed Laval the Little Entente is determined to resist similar rearmament moves by Hungary, asserting that such a move would bring the Balkans close to war.

France and the Little Entente are agreed on a common policy against Hitler's scuttling of the Versailles Treaty, but further exchanges of opinion are considered necessary before the proposed three-power conference among Italy, France and Britain at Stresa, Italy, on April 11.

Talks Close Tonight.

The Paris discussions were expected to close tomorrow evening, to enable Titulescu to assure others in the Little Entente that France will maintain their interests firmly when these powers meet.

Since Hitler's rearmament declaration on March 16, a new unity is noticeable among the nations who for years were at loggerheads, notably Italy and Jugoslavia. They were approaching sharply strained relations until Germany's rearming plans drew them together in a common cause.

Prince Paul of Jugoslavia, regent for young King Peter, may visit Rome shortly, further to cement this new friendship.

Meanwhile, the Quai d'Orsay began drafting a plan for Laval to take to Maxim Litvinov, Soviet foreign commissar, at the end of next month. The primary purpose of his visit is to complete details of the projected Eastern European security pact which France and Russia are determined to sign, regardless of the possible opposition of Germany and even Britain.

Hamilton and Aid Release Hostages

today in the Bayliss automobile, in which the two were held as hostages.

Smith and Bayliss were members of a posse scouring the section around Prentiss following the bank holdup. The bandits escaped after stealing four automobiles, shooting two persons and disarming the posse of which Smith and Bayliss were members.

At the police station here Smith and Bayliss positively identified photographs of Hamilton from among photographs of several criminals.

After talking with Will T. Griffin, Inspector of Memphis detectives, the men were taken to the Federal Building, where they were questioned at length by Department of Justice agents. Smith told Inspector Griffin that Hamilton's companion was shot in one cheek, the right hand, in the back and in one leg and was in a weakened condition.

Forced to Change Clothing.

Before entering Memphis the desperadoes had run a gauntlet of officers in north and central Mississippi.

"Hamilton had his machine gun on me, and I was forced to do most of the driving toward Memphis," Smith told police. Between Hernando and Memphis, the gunmen stopped the car and made Bayliss change clothes with the wounded man. Bayliss had on the bullet-ridden clothing when he arrived here.

While Smith drove, Bayliss was locked in the rear of the car, and after Bayliss changed clothes with Hamilton's companion he was forced to enter the rear compartment also.

"Stay in there now, and don't cause any trouble and we'll let you out when we get to Memphis," the men said Hamilton told them. When the car came to a stop here Hamilton told the men to "be quiet" and "we'll be back as soon as we steal another car."

Believed Headed for Texas.

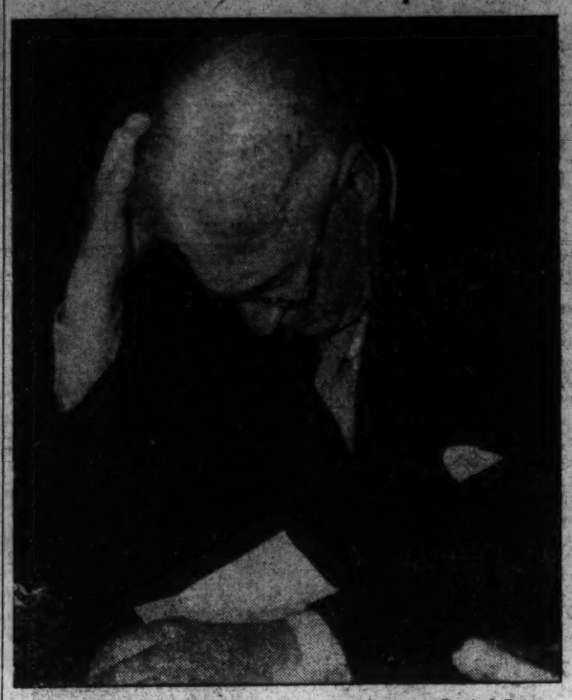
Police said Hamilton and his companion may have headed into Arkansas en route to the Texas country where they know every foot of the road.

The appearance of the pair in Memphis became known while an army of peace officers, National Guardsmen and armed citizens were searching for them in Mississippi, believing the fugitives bottled up between Columbia and Prentiss.

Sheriff Ennis Crawford, of Covington County, Miss., temporarily kidnaped by the bandits yesterday, was slightly wounded in the head during a skirmish with them.

Three women were held in Mississippi jails for questioning. One of them was said by officers to have driven the car used by the bandits in looting the Prentiss Bank.

Refused Chance for Ship Profits



Harris & Ewing.

Bernard M. Baruch tells Senate Finance Committee that he "passed up" an opportunity to get in "on the ground floor" of New York Shipbuilding in 1933 when he was told prospective Government business was certain.

Baruch Warns Of Profit Grab In Time of War

am in favor of your plans and this is merely a note of caution.

"We should think peace, talk peace and act peace but if war comes, we should be ready to fight it, to win it and to survive it. Wars are never won—they are only and always lost but at least we must seek victory."

Mr. Baruch previously had agreed with the committee's tentative proposals for limitation of incomes in wartime by drastic taxation. He also urged a price-fixing arrangement, whereby "a ceiling" would be placed over prices of all commodities in order that prices would not rise beyond normal levels.

He opposed conscription of industry, asserting that conscription of labor would have to follow and that he objected to the Government in wartime telling men where they must work. He said he believed in the principle that in wartime men must "fight or work" and that able-bodied men might be forbidden to follow certain vocations, but he also favored leaving men free to select a task.

Opposes a "Club."

The white-haired financier also opposed the suggestion that the Constitution should be amended to permit the Government to commandeer industry in wartime, contending that he was "constitutionally adverse to Constitutional amendments." He thought the Government had sufficient power now to commandeer an industry in wartime, but regarded that as an extreme step.

Senator Nye said he was convinced a constitutional amendment permitting the commandeering of industry was necessary as a Government club to hold over industry. But Mr. Barauch asserted effective pressure might be exerted in other ways.

Much of the day was spent on questions relating to the struggles which took place between the War Industries Board and industry over steel, copper and aluminum prices during the war. Mr. Hiss appeared to wish to make the point that the steel industry held up the Government at a crucial time and finally forced the Government to capitulate to its demands.

Mr. Baruch said that the Industries Board had a difficult time with Elbert H. Gary, of the United States Steel, but that finally the price agreed on was the best that could be expected under the circumstances. He said when this country first entered the war, American industry's attitude was "business as usual," but that this was succeeded by a co-operative attitude after American boys started arriving in France.

"Speaks From Experience."

Mr. Baruch, who usually has a genial manner, showed impatience at the lengthy questioning of him by Mr. Hiss who was in high school when the financier was chairman of the War Industries Board. At one point he rasped out meaningly that he was "speaking only from experience." And again he reminded Mr. Hiss and the committee that Gen. Von Hindenburg had paid American industry its greatest compliment when he said "American industry knew how to make war."

Mr. Baruch, however, soon became genial and chatty again. But late in the day he was obviously bored and perplexed as Mr. Hiss read many pages from various records to the witness and asked if he recollected the circumstances of this or that event 18 years ago. Usually Mr. Baruch did not, but conceded the record was probably right.

Once he balked at a voluminous document described by Mr. Hiss as a previously unpublished report of the War Industries Board. The former chairman immediately denied "paternity of that report," and after some discussion it developed it was written by Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, former NRA administrator, while he was attached to the War Industries Board, but had never been passed on by the board.

Mr. Baruch also revealed under questioning that in 1933 Bernard Smith, Wall street speculator, had purchased for Mr. Baruch without his permission 5,000 shares of stock in the New York Shipbuilding Corporation. Mr. Baruch was in Europe at the time and his secretary refused to accept the unauthorized purchase, he said.

He explained that Mr. Smith called him on the telephone and told him the stock was a "good buy" because the company would be certain to profit from Government contracts under the new naval warship building program.

"I wasn't interested in the stock of a company that would profit from Government business and I said to Smith, 'I'll tell you what you can do with that stock' and then I told him. I never owned the stock, although it was bought in my name."

Just before he left the witness stand Mr. Baruch, under questions from Senator Nye, again denied that he had profited from any stock market operations during his tenure of office here. He denied he had engaged in any short selling and said all the stock he divested himself of when he took the Government post was sold outright.

Mr. Baruch also denied that he selected any man for a post with the War Industries Board because of his politics or that political influence played any part in the board's activities.

Sleeping Nazi Rides Armed Into France

By the Associated Press.

Forbach, France, March 29.—Hundreds of Frenchmen rubbed their eyes in amazement today when a Nazi Storm Trooper in full uniform, including a dagger, strode out of the railroad station.

After police took the dagger, the Nazi explained he rode over the frontier onto French soil by mistake when he fell asleep. He was conducted to the frontier, this time in a police car.

Congress Receives Rent Law Demand

Consumers Council Urges Committees to Act.

The Senate and House District committees were urged yesterday by Mrs. John Boyle, jr., chairman of the Washington Consumers Council, to insure construction of low-rent housing in the District and to provide for efficient regulation of local housing conditions.

In a letter transmitting a resolution adopted by the Consumers Council last month, Mrs. Boyle pointed out that, although Washington is overcrowded and rents are increasing, there is little new construction for rental purposes.

The resolution proposed construction of low-cost dwellings under public auspices, compilation of a modern housing code for the District, establishment of an office to direct enforcement of housing standards, and delegation to the Municipal Court of such powers as are necessary "to cope with unusual conditions arising from the present emergency in connection with rental housing."

Stalin Suggests U. S. Join Pact For Far East

Proposes 6-Power Alliance to Insure Security in the Orient.

an hour and more before the British envoy met Stalin. Russian quarters said after that parley there was "noted improvement in both the political and economic relations between Soviet Russia and Great Britain."

What lines that improvement took was not divulged, although the two said they discussed "most of the outstanding problems in political relations" in "the same spirit of frankness and sincerity that characterized yesterday's discussions."

It was presumed the discussions centered largely about Germany's swift rearmament, something Eden was in position to treat ith authority by reason of his visit to Adolf Hitler earlier this week, and the eastern security pact Russia so much desires.

After his interview with Stalin Eden received the press at the British Embassy, where he is staying, but declined to divulge any particulars of th> conversation. A communique will be issued prior to his departure Sunday, he said.

U. S. Keeps Silent On Far East Pact

By the Associated Press.

Word of a plan for American participation in a Far Eastern peace pact, projected in the Eden-Litvinoff discussions at Moscow, was received here yesterday without comment.

Secretary Hull told newspapermen that Soviet Russia had not sounded out the United States on the plan and that there had been no discussions concerning such a proposed pact with envoys of other nations.

Hull added that the attitude of the United States toward peace pacts was well known, since this country was already a signatory to the Kellogg peace pact and the nine-power treaty.

American policy has been opposed to two-power pacts and Secretary Hull, some months ago, is understood to have rejected informal overtures by Japan that the two nations join in a Pacific pact, on the ground that the subject was already covered by existing multilateral treaties.

William C. Bullit, Ambassador to Soviet Russia, is now en route to Moscow after spending a three months' vacation in this country and it is not considered likely that the Soviet would make any formal overtures to Washington until Litvinoff had discussed the question with him.

tration camp at Dachau and that there was every indication similar action would be taken in the cases of Vicar Hickel, of Bechtheim, and the Rev. Schaefer, of Buschschlag, who for the moment are in local custody.

These men were said to have been arrested merely because they declined to obey orders of the Rev. Dietrich, whom Reichsbishop Ludwig Mueller had named bishop for Hessen against the will of the congregations.

Despite Nazi assurances that the state would keep out of the church fight, Dietrich was able successfully to invoke the aid of the police.

It was intimated in reliable church quarters that Reichsfuehrer Hitler may in the near future bring about an enforced settlement of the church dispute by appointing himself the head of a new state church. Legislation for the new church is in course of preparation.

Showdown Demanded In Austrian Conflict

By the Associated Press.

Vienna, March 29.—Undercover rivalry and friction between the major forces supporting Austria's government, the Fascist Heimwehr and the Catholic Storm Troops, burst into the open today.

Charges and counter-charges were thrown by newspapers of the dominant groups and a "showdown" demanded.

The Catholic Weltzblatt accused the Heimwehr of having started strife which "has raised all manner of vital issues and has already spread into the cabinet. Why does the Heimwehr harbor such enmity against other sections of the government front?" the organ asked.

Militant speeches made by Heimwehr leaders two days ago in Upper Austria, and until today not printed, were "played" by the Abendzeitung, newspaper of Maj. Emil Fey, minister of the interior and Heimwehr official.

Vienna police tonight raided a movie theater because of Nazi cheers and shouts of "Heil Hitler!" at the Emil Jannings film, "The Old King and the Young." Jannings played the role of a Prussian king.

Earl Sande Plans To Become Crooner

By the United Press.

New York, March 29.—Earl Sande tonight prepared to "get into the saddle" once more.

But the little jockey, who has won more than $3,000,000 in turf purses for his owners by booting thoroughbreds to victory—three of them in the Kentucky Derby—isn't going to ride a horse this time.

The "Earl of Idaho," in a dinner jacket instead of racing silks, made ready to swing aboard a night club piano and warble a few ditties. Earl, sandy-haired, 35 years old and a confessed tenor, has been "grooming" his tonsils for several years, he admitted tonight, with a cafe career in the offing.

If Dempsey can run a restaurant, Earl feels, there's no reason a former jockey can't become a crooner.

Italians Expect Imminent War With Abyssinia

Africans Abandon Direct Negotiations, Bringing Fresh Deadlock.

By the United Press.

Rome, March 29.—Threat of war between Italy and Abyssinia over border disputes in East Africa increased tonight when it was announced Abyssinia had abandoned direct negotiations with Italy.

Simultaneously, Gen. Federico Baistrocchi, undersecretary of war, told the Senate that war may be expected at any time and that "Italy will have 600,000 men fully equipped by the end of April."

"None can foretell when war will break out," Baistrocchi said, "but it is safe to say it will occur most unexpectedly, after a few days of political strain. The possibility of a sudden breaking of war impels us to be ready to do our utmost in order to be able to take the initiative and prevent the enemy from imposing its will upon us."

Abyssinia's ending direct negotiations brought the two countries to a fresh deadlock, with Abyssinia insisting on action by the League of Nations. Italy opposes intervention by Geneva, insisting on resumption of direct negotiations under terms of an Italo-Abyssinian treaty.

This turn in already badly-strained relations occurred when the Abyssinian foreign ministry refused to hold further conversations with the Italian minister in Addis Ababa, according to Italy's version of the friction.

Another indication of more serious trouble shortly was seen when the War Department ordered families of officers resident in the East African colonies to evacuate "in case of necessity." So far, none has left.

Baistrocchi told the Senate the reduction in the term of military service will be postponed while the present troubled world situation lasts. He announced other divisions soon would be motorized.

What Religion Means to Me

Dr. Abbot contributes the following article to The Post's series of informal discussions on the everyday benefits derived from religion. Dr. Abbot is a scientist, and an authority on the phenomena of the sun.

By Dr. C. G. Abbot,

Secretary, Smithsonian Institute.

Worship for the Creator of the universe and the Father of Spirits is the root of religion. Whoever has lived in this generation to see unfolding the majesty of the universe and the wonders of the nature of matter and if light must be filled with awe for the intelligence and the resources that could conceive and execute them. But not alone in majesty but in loveliness does the character of God appear as in the fragrant beauty of the rose and the sweet story of the prodigal son.

Whoever meditates on these perfections must feel that the better way in life is to strive toward the ideal rather than to grovel in self-seeking, filthiness and crime. It is impossible to express the proper influence of religion on the life better than by the words of St. Paul: Whatsover things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things. For then "the kingdom of heaven is within you."

For me religion is like a lady with a very white dress.

As one goes about with such thoughts as these how can he neglect to read the lives of saints, not only as portrayed in the Bible, but in biography. Of Pasteur, who loved mankind so much that he never spared himself in those studies which have driven back and softened the terrors of death; of Lincoln whose great love we may read in the last paragraphs of the second inaugural within his shrine near the Potomac; of Livingston whose heart burned at the injustice heaped upon the helpless inhabitants of Africa; of thousands whose love for God and mankind have given a glow to the pages of biography and history, and have lifted the world as far as it has gone yet out of savage self-seeking into the better way of the Golden Rule.

The same leading toward whatsoever things are pure and lovely gives one the companionship of the fine spirits of the present as well as the past. Who can spare those dear associations that a common religious faith brings? One gets to know the men and women to whom his community always turns when something good, worth while, and helpful is on foot.

Finally, it is the path of hope. When the hair whitens and the hearing dulls, when the limbs lose their spring and the eyes are less adaptable, many of the delights of younger days lose their flavor, or begin to be impossible ever again to realize except in memory, what is to take their place and fill up the vacant spaces in life's joys? It is to learn to live more and more in contemplation of the great excellence, and in anticipation of that great day when "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him."

Bill Introduced To Extend NRA And Keep 7(a)

Action in Senate Follows Warning by Richberg Speed Is Vital.

In. Meanwhile, the bill as introduced has been in possession of the committee for some time.

Green Testifies.

Instead of waiting until the hearings were concluded, Harrison broke into the middle of the sessions with the introduction of the bill. At conclusion of testimony yesterday by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, the committee went into executive session, attended by Richberg, and Harrison emerged with the bill. The hearings were continued this afternoon. They are expected to continue for days, possibly weeks.

There were evidences of haste in getting the bill before the Senate. The bill was introduced in the form of a "confidential committee print," dated March 27. The name of the Senator introducing it was left blank, as also were figures referring to working hours in industry, fines for violation and the size of industries that could be placed under blanket codes.

Introduction of the measure brought immediate opposition from Senators Borah and Long.

"My hurried reading of the bill," Borah said, "leads me to assume that no such bill will ever be enacted into law. I can not believe that such a confused, incoherent and contradictory measure will ever be enacted as a guide for the people of the country."

Long Attacks NRA.

Long said the NRA was unconstitutional but "they are trying to keep it alive by bulldozing the little fellow." He referred to withdrawal of appeal of the Belcher case and said he was going to tell the people of Louisiana not to pay any attention to the NRA.

The bill, as drafted, is expected to meet with stiff opposition within the Finance Committee, where the NRA has some of its strongest opponents. Strengthening and expanding of NRA is certain to be opposed. Labor leaders are expected to approve provision for re-enactment of Section 7(a), and provisions for wages and hours in codes. Failure to provide equal representation of labor with industry on enforcement boards is extremely disappointing to labor.

One of the most controversial sections is certain to be that defining interstate commerce. Lower courts have repeatedly held NRA unconstitutional on the ground that the Government was attempting to regulate commerce wholly within States. The definition contained in the bill would indicate that every business, with the possible exception of a bootblack stand or an apple cart, could be regulated.

On Interstate Commerce.

The provision reads:

"No trade or industry or subdivision thereof shall be eligible for a code, unless by reason of the character or volume of employment or sales, or the shipment, or use of goods shipped, in interstate or foreign commerce, or the effect of such trade or industry or subdivision thereof upon interstate or foreign commerce, or upon instrumentalities of interstate or foreign commerce, or upon the movement of goods or services in interstate or foreign commerce, or by reason of other conditions which the President finds to exist, said trade or industry or subdivision thereof either is engaged in interstate or foreign commerce, or so substantially affects interstate or foreign commerce that the establishment and enforcement of standards of fair competition in such trade or industry or subdivision thereof are necessary and proper for the protection or regulation of interstate or foreign commerce."

The bill provides that limited codes imposed by the President shall include hour and wage provision, prohibition of child labor, prohibition of unfair trade practices, and provision for examination of such books and records as are necessary to code enforcement.

Anti-Trust Provision.

The provision concerning antitrust laws says:

"Nothing in this title shall be construed to amend or repeal any provision of the antitrust laws of the United States; but the provisions incorporated in any code or agreement specifically approved, prescribed, or entered into and in effect in accordance with this title, and any action complying with such code or agreement taken while it is in effect or within 60 days thereafter, shall be lawful if and only if such code or agreement conforms in all respects to this title."

The bill also retains the AAA provisions of the old law, the oil administration provisions, and the provisions giving the President the right after an investigation to limit quantities of competitive merchandise imported into the United States.

Introduction of the bill followed an eloquent defense of NRA by Green, who following signing of the automobile code, declared NRA had failed and that labor could hope for little more from it.

"Labor believes we have made a start and that we are going in the right direction," he said. "It is not to be expected that those persons who are determined to follow their own selfish interests will indorse the NRA. It imposes restrictions upon them; it curtails their freedom to exploit their fellows. The confirmed chiselers, the people who never have wanted to play a fair game will not favor any kind of regulation. They are the people who are today determined to do away with all regulation and return to the pre-code days of long hours, low wages, and intolerable working conditions."

Action by the Department of Justice against the secretary of the Rubber Manufacturers Association was demanded yesterday by members of the Finance Committee after testimony that he blocked delivery of fire hose to Milwaukee for less than the uniform price bid by members of the industry.

Committee members also demanded that A. D. Kuntz, secretary of the association and secretary of the Rubber Manufacturers Code Authority, be called before the committee.

Thomas C. Blaisdell, former director of the Consumers Advisory Board of NRA, said 18 bidders had submitted identical bids on fire hose for Milwaukee, but that one had submitted a lower bid and was awarded the contract.

Blaisdell said Kuntz then warned Milwaukee not to award the low bidder the contract and wrote to members of the industry not to supply the low bidder with hose to fill the contract.

Senators Black (Democrat), Alabama, and Clark (Democrat), Missouri, demanded action by the Justice Department against Kuntz, while Senator Gore (Democrat), Oklahoma, asked that he be called before the committee.

Blaisdell said the case already was being studied by the Federal Trade Commission.

Text of Measure Extending Life of the NRA

74th Congress, 1st Session.
S. 2445.
In the Senate of the United States
March 13 (calendar day, March 29), 1935.

Mr. Harrison introduced the following bill, which was read twice and referred to the Committee on Finance.

A Bill to amend Title I of the National Industrial Recovery Act.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That Title I of the National Industrial Recovery Act, approved June 16, 1933, is hereby reenacted and amended to read as follows:

"Title I—Industrial Recovery.
"Declaration, Policy and Standards.

"Section 1. (a) The Congress finds and hereby declares that a national emergency exists, characterized by widespread unemployment and disorganization of industry and impairment of the standards of living of the American people, and that such unemployment, disorganization, and impairment decrease and burden interstate and foreign commerce and adversely affect the general welfare.

"(b) It is hereby declared to be the policy of Congress and the purpose of this title to meet the needs of the present emergency, to prevent the recurrence of such emergencies, and to promote the orderly and healthy development of trade and industry, by means of such regulations and provisions as are hereinafter authorized; and such regulations and provisions are declared to be necessary and proper to effectuate said policy and purpose.

"(c) In order to effectuate the policy of Congress and the purpose of this title, the President is authorized and directed to take action as hereinafter provided when he finds that such action is necessary and proper in the public interest and in accordance with any of the following limitations and standards; That such action

"(1) Established rules of fair competition.

"(2) Promotes or maintains cooperative organization and action of trade and industrial groups.

"(3) Induces or maintains cooperative relations between, or cooperative activities of, labor and management.

"(4) Promotes or maintains fair competition.

"(5) Prevents or eliminates competitive practices which are unfair or destructive of fair competition, or restraints upon trade which tend to diminish the amount thereof contrary to the public interest.

"(6) Promotes the fullest effective utilization of the productive and distributive capacities of trade and industry.

"(7) Prevents or eliminates restrictions upon production, except those hereinafter expressly sanctioned.

"(8) Promotes or maintains increased purchasing power and increased consumption of industrial and agricultural products.

"(9) Reduces or relieves unemployment or regularizes employment.

"(10) Establishes proper minimum wages and maximum hours of labor.

"(11) Improves the standards and conditions of labor.

"(12) Promotes the rehabilitation of industry.

"(13) Conserves natural resources, and prevents production or competition wasteful of such resources and injurious to commerce therein.

"(14) Removes unreasonable burdens upon, or protects the reasonable flow of, interstate or foreign commerce.

Administrative Agencies.

"Sec. 2. (a) In order to effectuate the policy of Congress herein declared, the President is hereby authorized and directed to establish such agencies, including an industrial planning and research agency, to accept and utilize such voluntary and uncompensated services to appoint, without regard to the provisions of the civil service laws, such officers and employes, and to utilize such Federal agencies, officers, and employes, and, with the consent of the State, such State and local agencies, officers, and employes, as he may find necessary, to prescribe their authorities, duties, responsibilities, and tenure, and, without regard to the Classification Act of 1923, as amended, to fix the compensation of any officers and employes so appointed. Any agency established or utilized pursuant to the provisions of this subsection is referred to in this title as a 'governmental agency.'

(b) The President may, to the extent that he may deem necessary for the efficient administration of this title, delegate any of his functions and powers under this title to such governmental agencies, officers, agents and employes as he may designate or appoint to act under his general supervision and control.

(c) For the purpose of more efficient administration of codes of fair competition and agreements under this title, the President is authorized to provide under such codes or agreements for the establishment of code authorities, committees, or other organizations, including provision for their duties, responsibilities, tenure, removal, compensation, and records. In the establishment of any such authority, committee, or other organization which is composed in whole or in part of persons in the trade or industry or subdivision thereof affected, provision shall be made that such persons shall be truly representative of the trade or industry or subdivision thereof, having due regard to sectional interests, volume of production and sales, and other pertinent factors. There shall be no delegation of any final discretionary power under this title to any such authority, committee, or other organization which is composed in whole or in part of persons in the trade or industry or subdivision thereof affected.

"(d) This title shall cease to be in effect, and any agencies heretofore or hereafter established hereunder shall cease to exist, on June 16, 1937.

"Codes of Fair Competition.

"Sec. 3. (a) Upon application to the President by one or more trade or industrial associations or groups, the President is authorized and directed to approve a code or codes of fair competition for the trade or industry or subdivision thereof represented by the applicant or applicants, if the President finds—

"(1) That such associations or groups impose no inequitable restrictions on admission to membership therein and are truly representative of such trades or industries or subdivisions thereof; and

"(2) That the trade or industry or subdivision thereof is eligible for a code within the limitations of subsection (b); and

"(3) That such code or codes comply with the provisions of this title, including the requirements set forth in section 7 (a) hereof; and

"(4) That such code or codes conform to and are reasonably designed to effectuate the policy of Congress in accordance with such of the standards set forth in section 1 (c) as are specified in his findings; and

"(5) That such code or codes are not calculated to promote or sanction the creation or maintenance of a monopoly or monopolies or practices destructive of fair competition, to eliminate or oppress small enterprises or to discriminate against them, or to promote or sanction devices for fixing prices or controlling production or distribution which are restrictive of fair competition; but devices for controlling prices, production, or distribution may be applied (A) where found necessary and proper by the President to protect small enterprises against discrimination or oppression or to deter the growth of monopolies, or (B) where found necessary to provide correctives for emergencies caused by large volumes of production in excess of effective demand, or by destructive price cutting, or (C) to those trades or industries which are now or hereafter subjected to governmental regulation of prices, services, and methods of operation, as public utilities, or as natural resource industries (such as, among others, coal, oil, or gas), or because they are found to be affected with a public interest; and

"(6) That public notice, and an opportunity to be heard either through oral or written presentation, have been given to interested parties (including those engaged in other steps of the economic process whose services and welfare may be affected) prior to approval by the President of such code or codes.

"(b) No trade or industry or subdivision thereof shall be eligible for a code, unless by reason of the character or volume of employment or sales, or the shipment, or use of goods shipped, in interstate or foreign commerce, or the effect of such trade or industry or subdivision thereof upon interstate or foreign commerce, or upon instrumentalities of interstate or foreign commerce, or upon the movement of goods or services in interstate or foreign commerce, or by reason of other conditions which the President finds to exist, said trade or industry or subdivision thereof either is engaged in interstate or foreign commerce, or so substantially affects interstate or foreign commerce that the establishment and enforcement of standards of fair competition in such trade or industry or subdivision thereof are necessary and proper for the protection or regulation of interstate or foreign commerce.

"(c) The President may, as a condition of his approval of any such code, impose such conditions (including requirements for the making of reports and the keeping of books and records and the examination thereof) for the protection of consumers, competitors, employes, and others, and in furtherance of the public interest, and may provide such exceptions to, exemptions from, and amendments of, the provisions of any such code, as the President upon a finding of fact deems necessary to effectuate the policy of Congress in accordance with the standards of this title: Provided, That any applicant or applicants for the approval of a code may, within twenty days after public announcement of an amendment to such code, or of a condition imposed on the approval of the code or any continuation of such approval, file with the President a withdrawal of their application for the code, and if the President finds that the code is no longer sponsored by those truly representative of the trade or industry or subdivision thereof, he shall cancel his approval of the code, but may prescribe and approve a limited code of fair competition applicable to such trade or industry or subdivision thereof, in conformity with the provisions of subsection (d) of this section.

"(d) Whenever, upon complaint or upon his own motion, after public notice and hearing (except where the President finds that there has been an adequate hearing upon an application for approval of a code) the President finds (1) that excessive hours or inadequate wages of employes in any trade or industry or subdivision thereof found eligible for a code within the limitations of subsection (b) are productive of unfair competition, and (2) that that the requirements of fair competition hereinafter set forth have not been established and are not effective for such trade or industry or subdivision thereof by a code voluntarily presented and approved, or by any agreement with the President made as hereinafter provided, then the President is authorized and directed to prescribe and approve a limited code of fair competition for such trade or industry or subdivision thereof, which he finds to be consistent with the requirements of paragraphs (3) to (6), inclusive, of subsection (a), and which shall contain only the following requirements: (A) Requirements of minimum wages and maximum hours of labor; (B) the requirements of section 7(a); (C) prohibition of child labor, and of any unfair business practice which is generally recognized as being dishonest, fraudulent, or otherwise unfair; (D) such provisions as he finds necessary to prevent unfair or oppressive conditions of employment or the waste of any natural resource; and (E) a provision requiring such information to be furnished, and such books and records to be kept and such examinations thereof to be made, as are necessary to effectuate the policy of Congress in accordance with the standards of this title. The maximum hours provided for in any such limited code shall not be less than — hours nor more than — hours per week; except that when it is found necessary, overtime work in excess of the prescribed maximum, to be paid for at the rate of time and one-half, may be provided for in such code. The President is authorized, after notice and opportiunity to be heard, as provided in subsection (a) (6) of this section, to provide such exceptions to, exemptions from, and amendments of, any such code as, upon a finding of fact, he deems necessary to effectuate the policy of Congress in accordance with the standards of this title.

"(e) The minimum wages provided for in any code prescribed or approved under this section shall be those which the President finds to be fair and reasonable and calculated to promote or to maintain fair competition within or between trades or industries or subdivisions thereof, after giving due consideration to living and working conditions in and surrounding the trade or industry or subdivision thereof which is directly involved and to regional or other differences in such conditions. The minimum wages so provided for may be differentiated according to experience or skill of employes, locality of employment, or other applicable considerations, but shall not be so graded or classified as to tend to set maximum wages.

"(f) Any code prescribed or approved under this section may require persons subject thereto to make equitable and proportionate contribution to the expenses necessary for the administration of such code. Collection and expenditure of any such contributions may be made in its own name by a code authority, committee, or other organization approved by the President for the administration of the code; but the President is authorized and directed to prescribe such regulations concerning notice, opportunity to be heard, review, budgets, bases of contribution, auditing, and other matters, as he finds necessary and proper to protect such persons and the public interest.

"(g) After the President has approved or prescribed any code under this section, the provisions of such code shall be the standards of fair competition for the trade or industry or subdivision thereof defined in such code. Any violation of such standards shall be deemed an unfair method of competition in commerce within the meaning of the Federal Trade Commission act, as amended; but nothing in this title shall be construed to impair the exercise of the powers of the Federal Trade Commission under such act, as amended, in a manner consistent with the provision of this title.

"(h) In order to limit the number of codes approved and to simplify the administration thereof, the President is authorized and directed, in carrying out the provisions of this title with respect to codes, to propose to each small trade or industry or subdivision thereof which he finds employs less than — employes, that such trade or industry or subdivision either (1) be covered by the code of an appropriate trade or industry or subdivision thereof which he finds employs — or more employes and has related interests or activities, or (2) be covered by a general code for small trades or industries, containing only requirements specially devised for and limited to the needs and conditions of such small trades or industries and subdivisions. No code for any such small trade or industry or subdivision shall be approved under subsection (a) unless persons truly representative thereof shall elect to be covered by a code in accordance with this subsection.

Agreements.

"Sec. 4 (a) The President is authorized to enter into agreements with, or approve voluntary agreements hereafter entered into between and among, persons engaged in a trade or industry or subdivision thereof, labor organizations, and trade or industrial organizations, associations, or groups, relating to any trade or industry or subdivision thereof, if he finds that such agreements (A) are reasonably designed to aid in effectuating the policy of Congress in accordance with the standards of this title with respect to trades or industries or subdivisions thereof found eligible for codes within the limitations of subsection (b) of section 3, and (B) are consistent with the requirements of paragraphs (3) to (6), inclusive, of subsection (a) of section 3. Any agreements so entered into or approved shall be enforcible in accordance with its terms by civil suit in any State or Federal court of competent jurisdiction.

"(b) The President shall, so far as practicable, afford every opportunity to employers and employes in any trade or industry or subdivision thereof to establish, by mutual agreement, the standards as to the maximum hours of labor, minimum wages and such other conditions of employment as may aid in effectuating the policy of Congress in accordance with the standards of this title.

Antitrust Laws.

"Sec. 5. Nothing in this title shall be construed to amend or repeal any provision of the antitrust laws of the United States; but the provisions incorporated in any code or agreement specifically approved, prescribed, or entered into and in effect in accordance with this title, and any action complying with such code or agreement taken while it is in effect or within 60 days thereafter, shall be lawful if and only if such code or agreement conforms in all respects to the limitations and provisions of this title. All such codes and agreements shall cease to be in effect on or before June 16, 1937.

Investigations.

"Sec. 6. Upon the request of the President, the Federal Trade Commission shall make such investigations as may be necessary to enable the President to carry out the provisions of this title, and for such purposes the Commission shall have all the powers vested in it with respect to investigations under the Federal Trade Commission Act, as amended.

Employers and Employes.

"Sec. 7(a). Every code of fair competition or agreement approved, prescribed, or entered into under this title shall contain the following statement of rights of employes, which are hereby declared and affirmed: (1) Employes shall have the right to organize and bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing, and shall be free from the interference, restraint, or coercion of employers of labor, or their agents, in the designation of such representatives or in self-organization or in other concerted activities for the purpose of collective bargaining or other mutual aid or protection; and (2) no employe and no one seeking employment shall be required as a condition of employment to join any company union or to refrain from joining, organizing, or assisting a labor organization of his own choosing.

"(b) All employers in the trade or industry or subdivision thereof with respect to which any such code or agreement is in effect shall comply with the requirements of subsection (a) and with the maximum hours of labor, minimum wages and other conditions of employment set forth in any such code or agreement.

"Application of Agricultural Adjustment Act.

"Sec. 8 (a) This title shall not be construed to repeal or modify any of the provisions of title I of the act entitled, 'An act to relieve the existing national economic emergency by increasing agricultural purchasing power, to raise revenue for extraordinary expenses incurred by reason of such emergency, to provide emergency relief with respect to agricultural indebtedness, to provide for the orderly liquidation of joint-stock land banks, and for other purposes,' approved May 12, 1933, as amended; and such title I of said act approved May 12, 1933, may for all purposes be hereafter referred to as the 'Agricultural Adjustment Act.'

"(b) The President may, in his discretion, in order to avoid conflicts in the administration of the Agricultural Adjustment Act and this title, delegate any of his functions and powers under this title with respect to trades or industries or subdivisions thereof which are engaged in the handling of any agricultural commodity or product thereof, or of any competing commodity or product thereof, to the Secretary of Agriculture.

"(c) Nothing in this act, and no regulation thereunder, shall prevent an individual from pursuing the vocation of manual labor and selling or trading the products thereof; nor shall anything in this act, or regulation thereunder, prevent anyone from marketing or trading the produce of his farm.

Oil Regulation.

"Section 9(a) The President is further authorized to initiate before the Interstate Commerce Commission proceedings necessary to prescribe regulations to control the operations of oil pipe lines and to fix reasonable, compensatory rates for the transportation of petroleum and its products by pipe lines, and the Interstate Commerce Commission shall grant preference to the hearings and determination of such cases.

"(b) The President is authorized to institute proceedings to divorce from any holding company any pipe-line company controlled by such holding company which pipe-line company by unfair practices or by exorbitant rates in the transportation of petroleum or its products tends to create a monopoly.

Rules, Regulations and Definitions.

"Section 10(a). The President is authorized and directed to prescribe such rules and regulations as may be necessary to carry out the policy of Congress in accordance with the standards of this title, and to secure compliance with codes and agreements approved, prescribed, or entered into under this title.

"(b) The President is further authorized to make reasonable provision for the promotion and maintenance of codes and agreements under this title by means of distinctive insignia or labels, by requirements that departments and agencies of the United States purchase from persons complying with such codes or agreements, or by other appropriate means. The President may regulate the distribution, use, and display of such insignia or labels, in order that purchasers and consumers of goods and services may be assisted in supporting the standards of fair competition provided for in this title.

"(c) The President may, from time to time, cancel or modify any order, approval, rule, or regulation issued under this title, and each code and agreement approved, prescribed, or entered into under this title shall contain an express provision to that effect.

"(d) As used in this title—

"(1) The term 'person' includes any individual, any partnership, association, corporation, trust, or other form of enterprise, and any receiver, trustee, executor, or administrator;

"(2) The term 'code of fair competition' or 'code' means any group of provisions heretofore or hereafter approved or prescribed as such by the President under this title; and

"(3) The terms 'interstate and foreign commerce' and 'interstate or foreign commerce' include, except where otherwise indicated, trade or commerce among the several States and with foreign nations, or between the District of Columbia or any Territory of the United States and any State, Territory, or foreign nation, or between any insular possessions (including the Philippine Islands) or other places under the jurisdiction of the United States, or between any such possession or place and any State or Territory of the United States or the District of Columbia or any Territory or any such insular possession or other place under the jurisdiction of the United States.

"Tariff Adjustment

"Sec. 11. On his own motion, or if any labor organization, or any trade or industrial organization, association, or group, which has complied with the provisions of this title, shall make complaint to the President that any article or articles are being imported into the United States in substantial quantities or increasing ratio to domestic production of any competitive article or articles and on such terms or under such conditions as to render ineffective or seriously to endanger the maintenance of any code or agreement under this title, the President may cause an immediate investigation to be made by the United States Tariff Commission, which shall give precedence to investigations under this section, and if, after such investigation and such public notice and hearing as he shall specify, the President shall find the existence of such facts, he shall, in order to effectuate the policy of this title, direct that the article or articles concerned shall be permitted entry into the United States only upon such terms and conditions and subject to the payment of such fees and to such limitations in the total quantity which may be imported (in the course of any specified period or periods) as he shall find it necessary to prescribe in order that the entry thereof shall not render or tend to render ineffective any code or agreement made under this title. In order to enforce any limitations imposed on the total quantity of imports, in any specified period or periods, of any article or articles under this section, the President may forbid the importation of such article or articles unless the importer shall have first obtained from the Secretary of the Treasury a license pursuant to such regulations as the President may prescribe. Upon information of any action by the President under this section the Secretary of the Treasury shall, through the proper officers, permit entry of the article or articles specified only upon such terms and conditions and subject to such fees, to such limitations in the quantity which may be imported, and to such requirements of license, as the President shall have directed. The decision of the President as to facts shall be conclusive. Any condition or limitation of entry under this section shall continue in effect until the President shall find and inform the Secretary of the Treasury that the conditions which led to the imposition of such condition or limitation upon entry no longer exist.

"Enforcement.

"Section 12. (a) The several district courts of the United States, the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, and the United States courts of any Territory or other place subject to the jurisdiction of the United States (including the courts of the Philippine Islands), are hereby invested with jurisdiction of any proceedings under this title, including jurisdiction to prevent and restrain violations of any code or agreement approved, prescribed, or entered into under this title; and it shall be the duty of the several district attorneys of the United States, in their respective districts, under the direction of the Attorney General, to institute proceedings in equity to prevent and restrain any violation of any such code or of any such agreement to which the President is a party.

"(b) Any violation of the provisions of any code or of any rule or regulation, approved, prescribed, or continued in effect, under this title, as amended, shall be a misdemeanor. Any person violating any such provision shall upon conviction thereof be subject to a fine of not more than $——. Each day such violation continues shall be deemed a separate offense. Any agency of the United States established or utilized by the President under section 2(a) and authorized to administer such provisions may, prior to the commencement of suit with respect to any such offense, subject to the approval of the Attorney General, compromise the liability, civil or criminal or both, arising under this title with respect to such offense (1) upon payment of a sum, not in excess of $——, to be assessed and collected by such agency, and (2) upon the entry of a consent decree enjoining the future commission of such an offense, or upon entering into a stipulation that the United States may upon its own motion at any time upon five days' notice to the violator cause such a decree to be entered by any court of competent jurisdiction.

"(c) Whenever, after due notice and opportunity to be heard, upon complaint by an employe or his representative, alleging any violation or violations, occurring after the date this title as amended takes effect, of any provision of any code relating to minimum wages or maximum hours of labor, any governmental agency established or utilized by the President under section 2(a) determines that any person has violated such provision, such agency shall find the facts constituting such violation and the amount of damage, if any, which such employe has suffered as a result of such violation, and shall make an order, incorporating such findings, directing the violator to pay such damages to such employe on or before the date fixed in such order.

"(d) If the violator does not comply with the order on or before the date fixed in such order, the complainant may within six months from the date of the order file in any State or Federal court of competent jurisdiction a petition setting forth the causes

Certainly Versatile.

The remarkable versatility of the Senate Munitions Committee can no longer escape public notice. Under the not always self-effacing leadership of Senator Nye, it has steered toward so many different objectives that all save the most patient observers have forgotten its original goal.

Eight months ago, we may be permitted to recall, the Nye committee set out to investigate the private manufacture of munitions. Its objective was admirable. In spite of a tendency toward prosecution rather than fact-finding, much thought-provoking information was revealed. Public sentiment was undoubtedly aroused in favor of practical legislation to eliminate controllable evils.

Before a clear-cut policy of dealing with the munitions makers had been evolved, however, the committee plunged happily into the problem of taking the profits out of war. Here again some useful testimony was interspersed between volumes of personal controversy, innuendo and plain drivel. Now the committee is veering sharply in another direction, hastily conducting hearings and trying to formulate a policy to preserve American neutrality in case of war in Europe or Asia.

Between these major performances the committee has conducted quite a number of sideshows. Apparently there is no aspect of the broad problems of national defense and international relations which is outside its ken. Very possibly there is still a Senate Committee on Foreign Relations. But that of Senator Nye seems bent on making it superfluous.

The hit-and-run tactics of the Munitions Committee are all the more regrettable because of the fundamental character of the problems it has touched upon. Few issues more complicated than that of evolving a neutrality policy have ever confronted Congress. The question of preserving peace for this country, even though the world may become inflamed with war, demands the most highly-trained scrutiny.

But the Nye committee is not working toward intelligent action in any field. It flits from one complicated subject to another, leaving in its wake sensational charges, disconnected testimony and confused reactions. It may, of course, eventually produce some concrete legislative proposals—after publicity values have been exploited to the full. If so, we venture to predict, inquiry will show that the bills were drafted for Senator Nye by the Department of State, with little or no reference to the committee's ingenuous ballyhoo.

A Long-Sought Advance.

Pedestrians and automobile owners alike will receive with enthusiasm the news that the bill establishing financial responsibility for motor vehicle operators is assured of enactment. The law will apply to drivers of all private, commercial and taxi vehicles. When a motorist is convicted of drunken driving, leaving an accident without identifying himself or failing to satisfy a judgment for damages arising from an accident he will not be permitted to drive again unless he takes out liability insurance or posts an $11,000 bond. Driving permits and registrations will be suspended until one guaranty or the other is provided. Officials confidently expect to lower substantially the present traffic accident rate.

Why, it may be asked, have the legislators gone only half way in this matter? The irresponsible driver apparently is permitted one major transgression before insurance is required of him. Why is he allowed any grace at all? There are two reasons. Other communities, notably in Massachusetts, have discovered that compulsory insurance encourages reckless driving, actually increases the accident rate and fosters abuses in the collection of insurance benefits. In the second place, the high insurance rates required of individuals known to be reckless (if, indeed, there are companies willing to assume such unpropitious risks at all) will serve to keep many irresponsible drivers off the streets automatically.

Thanks to an abrupt about-face on the part of Mr. Blanton, of Texas, Mrs. Norton's committee was able to ignore the proposed compulsory taxi insurance amendment. However desirable it would be to require full financial responsibility of the city's public carriers, it is generally agreed that such a measure should best be considered separately. This bill, though it would mean a considerable boost in taxi fares, should improve Washington traffic conditions by forcing many of the fly-by-night cab operators off the street.

Pending its passage, however, the community may congratulate itself that a long-sought advance has already been realized in the campaign to promote safety by stricter regulation of the hazardous business of traveling in the District.

Historic Toast.

I raise my glass to the health of His Majesty the King of England, to the prosperity and happiness of the British people and to your very good health, sir.

Embodied in that toast, addressed in Moscow by Foreign Commissar Maxim Litvinoff to Anthony Eden, British Lord Privy Seal, is a fascinating chapter of world history. It is the chapter which traces the transformation of Soviet foreign policy from à doctrinaire defiance to an ingratiating and highly successful diplomacy. At Berlin, Hitler had sought to impress the British envoys (in German) with the menace of barbarian Russia to world peace. At Moscow, Litvinoff responded by felicitously toasting His Majesty (in perfect English) in champagne of the great proletarian republic. Could there have been a more subtle, a more perfectly adroit, response to German allegations?

The contrast between Nazi truculence and Communist suavity is, moreover, emblematic of a transition which has much more than European significance. Out of the ruins of the Versailles Treaty, crumbled by Hitler two weeks ago today, will come some new orientation which must profoundly affect the entire world. Fear that the development will be of a warlike nature is now causing this country to review its traditional attitude on neutrality, and to consider the advisability of complete commercial isolation in the event of hostilities. And this is but one of a number of reactions which indicate the tremendous importance of the present diplomatic maneuvers in Europe.

There must be many more of these "conversations" before the future becomes at all clear. But after a chaotic fortnight certain trends stand out. There is sufficient appreciation of the essential justice of Germany's claim to arms equality to prevent anything in the nature of a "preventive war." On the other hand there is sufficient apprehension as to Germany's next moves—an apprehension not materially assuaged by the Hitler-Simon discussions—to make the development of a permanent anti-German coalition entirely possible. Whether or not that may be expected will be more apparent after the meetings at Stresa, scheduled for April 11, from which Germany will be excluded and to which Russia has not yet been invited.

One obvious issue, therefore, is whether or not the Third Reich, having gained its major point of equality, will be sufficiently temperate to abandon more grandiose designs, such as the pan-German expansion outlined by Hitler in Mein Kampf, and will leave the smaller irritants, such as the Memel problem, for amicable treatment by patient negotiation. The solution of this issue rests almost entirely in Hitler's hands. If he is moderate now, what he has already done will doubtless be regularized. If he is immoderate, the danger of another war will become increasingly great.

A scarcely secondary issue, however, is the extent and manner in which Germany's neighbors will combine, pending some further definition of German intentions. It is this issue which gives such importance to the Anglo-Russian conversations. For British policy seeks constructive compromise in the face of an overt threat to peace, while that of Russia has been tending more and more to the development of effective collective opposition to an aggressor, whether Germany or Japan. Such a move would not merely safeguard the Communist state against possible invasion from her potential enemies. It would also at one step bring Russia into the very forefront of world politics and give her a commanding position at the international councils of both Europe and Asia.

Which, after all, brings us back to Litvinoff's historic toast. King Henry of Navarre thought Paris worth a mass. And certainly Comrade Litvinoff must deem his chance of world diplomatic leadership well worth the sip of champagne he dedicated to King George.

Pink Slip Repeal.

Both House and Senate have voted by a large majority to repeal that indefensible publicity measure referred to as "pink slip" legislation. While an amendment inserted by the Senate will necessitate another vote upon the proposal, it is regarded as certain that the pink slips will be thrown into the Treasury's waste-paper baskets.

It seems incredible that Congress should have failed to perceive from the beginning the perniciousness of a kind of publicity that serves no purpose except to satisfy idle curiosity or to enable mischief-making persons or blackmailers to run down the victims of their plots. However, the debate on the subject has done a good deal to clear up the distinction between the right and the wrong kind of publicity.

Senator Long, as a defender of publicity, was challenged to state the amount of his income. He rose to the occasion, but felt it necessary to indicate beyond pink slip limits how he had spent some of his extra earnings. Perhaps his colleagues suddenly realized on that occasion that the publishing of income returns leads logically to more probing into the private lives of taxpayers than they had contemplated. That is especially true if the taxpayers are also officeholders.

While most people will heartily applaud the destruction of the pink slips, it would be salutary to have more information of the kind that Bernard Baruch voluntarily gave the Senate Munitions Committee in refutation of insinuations regarding his war-time activities. Many public men are the victims of their own reticence in the face of a clamor of this kind.

Obviously, there is no legitimate reason for opening personal records to inspection under ordinary circumstances. But when a public-spirited individual finds his opinions rendered suspect and his usefulness impaired by malicious rumors, he would do well to follow Mr. Baruch's example and invite doubters to examine the record.

Animals On The Air.

This afternoon hundreds of children in a local playhouse will be listening to a lady telling about the lives and habits of animals in the zoo. The lady who will be speaking is Mrs. William Mann, wife of the director of the National Zoological Park, and therefore in a position to know her animals.

On the surface, this appears nothing more than an announcement that a group of children will be amused for a few hours on a Saturday afternoon. But it is the means by which they are entertained that suggests a partial solution to the much-discussed problem of wholesome radio programs for the younger generation.

Probably Mrs. Mann simply picked that which is nearest and dearest to her own heart when she chose to talk on animals. But if she had searched the world over, she could not have found a subject more congenial to her audience. The love of children for animals goes back to the beginning of history. It will be with the race when the fatuous characters of many modern "bedtime stories" are properly forgotten.

What is good for children and what children like has been a question of research, experiment and discussion on the part of parents and psychologists for many years. At one time, resolutions were passed against the films of Charlie Chaplin. Now these are regarded as classics and delegations of New York school children are urged to attend their revivals. Mark Twain even received his share of condemnation from those who failed to appreciate his books for and about juveniles. Today they are almost obligatory to every well-rounded child's library. One must conclude from this that the child is not as changeable in his tastes as are his parents as to what his tastes should be.

But there is one field of amusement which even the psychologist has been loath to enter with probings and tests. That is the animal kingdom. Here at least the child, the parent, the psychologist, and the radio entertainer may find a common and a happy hunting ground.

Local Control Wins.

Release of the $1,400,000 for construction of the Glenn Dale tuberculosis hospital marks a final surrender by the PWA to the judgment of local authorities. The real struggle over this issue subsided several months ago. It is worthy of note now chiefly because it is the second incident recently in which the PWA has been forced to retreat from an indefensible intrusion in municipal affairs.

District officials insisted from the beginning that it was their responsibility to decide on the location of Washington's tuberculosis hospital. They chose the Glenn Dale site as a matter of course, since the Children's Tuberculosis Sanitarium is already located there. But unreasoning opposition to this plan by the PWA did not collapse until a presidential commission confirmed the judgment of local authorities.

A very similar issue was involved in the attempt of Secretary Ickes to oust Robert W. Moses from his position of New York Park Commissioner or his membership on the Triborough Bridge Authority. In this case likewise the pressure of public opinion forced the public works administrator to recede from an untenable position. Both the hospital for Washington and the bridge for New York are being constructed without the Federal dictation at first desired by PWA headquarters.

If the aid granted municipalities by the PWA should result in undermining local government its ultimate effect would be more demoralizing than constructive. City officials who have vigorously resisted this threatened encroachment have rendered a service that will be enjoyed far beyond their own communities. For it appears that Secretary Ickes has learned a lesson that will not have to be repeated.

An easy way to cure a country of militarism would be to require all male citizens to take two weeks' military training each year, with only top-sergeants and second lieutenants in command.

Every man has the idea, false though it is, that he should marry a woman less intelligent than he. This accounts for bachelors.

Good For Next Year And Thereafter.

From the Kansas City Times.

At least apperances will be sweetened up for the average citizen and taxpayer in the voting year of 1936, according to interpretations of the situation coming out of Washington. Because of the work relief funds of nearly $5,000,000,000 shortly to be made available, no extraordinary appropriation next year will be necessary, and the budget for the one fiscal year will be nominally balanced. Furthermore, it is indicated, additional taxes may not be considered until after the next Presidential campaign is over.

That is beautifully to the good. But it's touchy business, nevertheless. Because there is no saying what may be the frame of mind of the citizen and taxpayer, once he has been even temporarily relieved from anxiety about appropriations, the budget and more taxation. He might demand that the policy be made permanent. In fact, wouldn't it be a capital idea to incorporate in the platform a plank carrying that pointed promise?

A Real Estate Agent's View.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As agent and representative for Eastland Gardens, Inc., the Potomac Electric Power Co., the Barnes heirs and various other owners of the 200-acre proposed airport site at Benning Race Track, D. C., as well as six other large tracts which I offered for aviation fields for defense on every side of Washington, I feel that the decision of the congressional sub-committee is absolutely fair to all concerned, and I am perfectly willing to abide by its decision and to have my proposed airports judged on their merits by the experts named.

I believe this is a very fair and just decision, notwithstanding the fact that I also believe that the members of the congressional subcommittee were fair enough and open-minded enough and fully capable themselves of making the selection of the site, as through weeks of study from every angle they familiarized themselves with all the facts in the case, and personally went with me to inspect every site I offered, taking a deep interest in each one presented, taking no sides, and remaining absolutely neutral, judging on merit alone.

The Gravelly Point bill has been found to have no merit. I was present at all the hearings and I know that the evidence more than justified the decision. Gravelly Point is under the Potomac River and it will take at least $2,500,000 merely to fill it in. Gravelly Point will be just 3,500 feet from Bolling Field when completed, and experts testified that this is too near for the Army maneuvers to be carried on without hazard to human life. Surely, we want no sacrifice of human life, no terrible accidents to happen every day! All the other hazards of Washington-Hoover Field pertain also to Gravelly Point, as they are only a short distance apart, and every expert and every transport line operator testified that they were momentarily expecting a frightful accident to happen on account of the present hazards from tall smokestacks, live wires, etc., at Washington Airport, besides the fog around that area.

I personally know that the committee was more than fair in all of these long hearings, patiently listening day after day to the voluminous testimony of experts for both sides of the matter. The report of so earnest a body of men, sworn to uphold justice to all alike, acting in the greater interests of this great Nation of ours, deserves to be treated with respect at least by our so-called unbiased reporters of the daily news, and they should not be maligned or slandered when they refuse to become a party to some pork-barrel bill. As I understand it, a newspaper is chartered to report the news, the facts, not to distort the news or the facts, or to throw mud when pet hobbies that they have sponsored are shown up to be pork barrels or mud-holes under water such as no one would dare to attempt to unload upon the taxpayers, as Gravelly Point is.

But I do want you to be sport enough to eat your own words, and to do so at once! You can show your fairness, if you have any, by publishing this as an editorial.

AGNES WATERS.

Washington, March 27.

Strachey, Propagandist.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I had no idea of returning with thanks for your fine editorial of March 14, anent Mr. Strachey (who, by the way, I see Baltimore shunted into some workman's hall, refusing him the rostrum of one of the big theaters), but the sirenic syllables of D. M. S. in her recent communication "gets me." So, you were shinning up the Edenic apple tree and didn't know it. Watch your step, sir!

As long as the ladies of the clubs sanction and hail the presence of the typical English racketeers and trouble-makers in the forum of feminine adulation, would it not behoove you and all other American males to join in singing "Hail Brittanica," read the "weak note" of Britain to Hitler as part of your daily devotions, peruse the communistic sentiments of Strachey to your children, accolade the cute "cut-ins" of H. G. Wells in the Coughlin Hugh-Huey interchanges, and place a beretta upon the crown of Belloc as the maladminister of the life of that valiant (misguided or otherwise) John Milton, against all things prelatical or papal, to the satisfaction of the readers of Belloc's own faith?

Do you not know, sir, that the great god Propaganda has sent forth these and others from the shores of Britain, to the myriad ladies of the sentimental reactions of D. M. S., as their handmaids?

Perhaps after the deficient American males shall have sat at the feet of the British adepts, and learned the secrets of a woman's heart, they may find some opportunity to do two things. To get some chance to have their books published, against the imponderable support for the British writers, of the ladies whom you so adequately described in your editorial, or they may have some chance to get upon the paying public platforms, even of women's clubs!

Lest I be thought an American boor by your correspondent, permit me to remark that it fell to my lot to do writing for publication, that covered the entire field of woman's development in status from times before history to the twentieth century.

Now a word of thanks to the British visitors, here to induct American men into the graces of good manners and the value of good minds: let us hail their presence as we do the coming of the robins in spring. They are harbingers of prosperity, with the instinct even of snowbirds (for an ornithological change of figure). They sniffed the weather of cold adversity and remained on their home shores. They sniffed the prospects through the priming of the pump, and they flocked over to put their ladies beneath the flow, thin but promising. They are the truest signs of returning good times — but certain publishing houses and certain women's clubs have done no service to bring them over here. Hence your generous and acute proposal of a method to dispose of them. One addition, pray: Congress should exact a 50 per cent license tax on all foreign lecturers, and upon all American publishers, a similar amercement for their propaganda, against the interest of American writers.

B. B. J.

Washington, March 18.

Experienced In Dust.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: You inserted a letter in the issue of March 27 over which I grew apoplectic. "Another Dust Cloud" is inferentially "bamboozling the public." As though dust and soil control were fantastic dreams, and not proven realities.

In an animated discussion over crosion, dust control, afforestation, all wise measures of the present Administration—I could take most double-barrelled adjactives and invectives with a smile. But swivel-chair agriculturist——? Oh, no. I couldn't stand that! Because, you see, I claim to have some experience.

As a tenderfoot pioneer I cleared a small ranch in southeastern Oregon. One of my first moves was the building of a woven-wire fence—a notice to the hordes of frisky jack rabbits, that I intended a contest for the possession of sundry acres of alfalfa, grain and what not. My posts were not yet on the ground but I blithely dug a row of post holes. A playful dust storm came along next morning and filled them up again. I was getting the experience. Fields of alfalfa planted by early settlers had parapets of silt all along their edges when the sagebrush and greasewood cover was cleared from adjoining tracts. But today the soil is all anchored by growing vegetation.

The gentleman's next remarks upon submarginal lands show conclusively that he has missed the point entirely.

I am reminded of Mark Twain's humoristic description of a French duel.

H. DE JERSEY.

Washington, March 27.

Pensions As Punishments.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Police Department is threatened with another of its periodic "shake-ups." This means, it may be assumed, because these "shake-ups" all end the same way, that punishment will be meted out to some of the offending members of the force; and, insofar as it concerns the higher-ups who are involved, the usual course being pursued, the punishment will take the form of enforced retirement at half pay for life.

A retirement law properly administered should be a very wonderful thing; but it operates as a perversion of justice when it is made an instrument of punishment.

Why not, for a change, try demoting or reducing in rank those officers who by their derelictions have brought the police establishment into disrepute? Why must they always be kicked upstairs?

JOHN M. KIRBY.

Washington, March 28.

Headlines Simplified.

Headline writing is an art—and, like all art, it is a natural gift.

But now the headline has been reduced to a science by Heinrich Strumann, in a book recently published in London. He gives headline language a special classification, as "block language and frees it from most of the rules of grammar. Its parts of speech are "nominals, neutrals, verbals and particles." But these should be used with precision. He warns headline writers against using a word "in internominal position of junctional character' and likewise they should be careful not to combine two words, of which the first is "a d-nexus and the other a semivariable in postnominal position with active function."

Yes, headline writing is just as simple as that.

The Post Impressionist

Darkest America.

Post Office, Saturday.

THE British Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts is famous to the ends of the earth. Of so much we have long been aware. What has only recently been recalled to our memory is the fact that this world-girdling organization owed its origin to benighted conditions in our own America.

The S. P. G., as all England calls it, is now celebrating its 234th birthday and delving into its own past. Hence that news about America.

Toward the end of the seventeenth century, Bishop Compton sent Dr. Bray—the missionary Bray, not the Vicar of Bray—to direct the Anglican Church's work over here. He, on his return, "so moved the authorities with his account of conditions in the Plantations and Colonies" that the S. P. G. promptly received a Royal Charter:

"The design is, in the first place, to settle the State of Religion as well as may be among our own people there, which by all accounts we have, very much wants . . . pious care; and then to proceed to the best Methods . . . toward the conversion of the natives."

Throughout all its long life, the S. P. G. has preserved its correspondence from every corner of the earth. Reports, diaries, letters: as long ago as 1900, they included more than 160,000 documents, of which over 30,000 were dated during the eighteenth century — a source-library for geographers, anthropologists, historians.

Among the writers are pioneers and princes, statesmen and physicians, the aborigines of strange lands and out-of-the-way islands and the missionaries engaged in converting them. There are hundreds of unduplicated personal records concerning settlements in Canada, outposts in Australia, uprisings in India—of the Boxer Rebellion, the Crimean, Kafir and Zulu wars—of shipwreck and cyclone, of "murder and sudden death" and high heroism.

Often, letters otherwise devoted to details of merely passing interest will reveal a passage which corrects some story long accepted in different form by the chroniclers of the British Empire's outposts.

For generations, the English school books, in describing the Indian Mutiny, have told how, when it became clear that massacre was imminent and unescapable at Cawnpore, Chaplain Moncrieff gathered the doomed English residents about him and calmly recited the Anglican prayers for the dying. Moncrieff's fellow-chaplain seems to have been a Mr. Cockey, and it appears that among the Cawnpore residents was a Mrs. Greenwood, whose ayah escaped.

Now there has been found in the correspondence of the S. P. G., a letter of that fatal year, postmarked "Calcutta," in which one reads:

"I heard three days ago from a friend of the late Mr. Moncrieff . . . that it was not, as we had all thought, Mr. Moncrieff who read prayers at that last trying moment in the Cawnpore massacre, but Mr. Cockey. Mr. Moncrieff had died at an earlier period of the siege. The information is from Mrs. Greenwood's ayah, and is quite positive."

In all these records, America's place is large—until part of America becomes the U. S. A.

One contemporary diary transcribes a petition to Queen Anne, dispatched by four Iroquois sachems visiting England in 1709.

"Great Queen," it begins, "we have undertaken a long and dangerous voyage which none of our predecessors could be prevailed upon to do: the motive that brought us was that we might have the honour to see and relate to our Great Queen, what we thought absolutely necessary for the good of her and us her allies, which are on the other side of the great water."

There ensue phrases of loyalty and mention of a gift of wampum belts as a sign of the fidelity of the Six Nations to the British Crown in that colonial share of the War of the Spanish Succession known over here as "Queen Anne's War" . . .

The obstinate and lengthy refusal of political authority in England to permit an Anglican episcopate in America required that continuous supplies of clergymen be sent out from the mother country to the colonies. These ministers clearly observed and accurately reported the rapid rise of dissatisfaction with the crown among their parishioners.

Nearly a decade before resentment had flamed into armed remonstrance, such a cleric wrote back to the S. P. G.:

"Such a universal spirit of clamour and discontent—little short of madness—such an opinion of oppression prevails throughout the Colonies as I believe was scarcely ever seen in any country on earth; and it seems to be the determined and inflexible resolution of most people from Halifax to Georgia never to submit to what they esteem so great an infringement of their essential rights as some of the late Acts of the British Parliament."

Wherefrom it would appear that, whatever the State of Religion among the Colonials, their political souls must have "very much wanted pious care."

Five Million Follow Classic In New York

Carnera And Baer Of Contract Gag Seconds And Settle Down For Three-Week Battle.

By Ralph E. Renaud.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

New York.

THE battle of the century started in New York this week and will continue for three solid weeks to a decision or a knockout, as the case may be. No title goes with the contest and it draws no gate, but tremendous issues hang upon its outcome. Theoretically, it will decide the question of who is the best bridge player in the United States, Ely Culbertson, the Crockford Kid, or Hal Sims, the Jersey Giant. Actually there are 5,000,000 other bridge fiends in the country each of whom knows he could lick the pants off either. Maybe some of them are right.

The contest should really be called a battle royal as four trained-to-the-minute scrappers appear in the arena at one and the same time. However, the other two battlers happen to be Mrs. Sims and Mrs. Culbertson, so the principals are stripped to the waist only in a manner of speaking. But the other aspects of the ring are there—the raised platform, the roped in space, the referee, the old grudge fight, the seething crowd of kibitzers with their hearts set on blood. And don't overlook the ubiquitious press agent.

Sims is the Carnera of the card table. A mammoth of a man, he usually sits in a specially constructed chair. But this time he reposes on steel tubing which, though it is guaranteed not to collapse even under the impact of a grand slam doubled and redoubled, is also supplied to the other players. Sims has a heavy hand in real life as well as with cards. Bridge fans will never forget the thrilling moment when he upped and slapped Oswald Jacoby's face. The whole bridge world quivered and was dumb—or dumber.

He plays a mean game, too, and can swing a nasty upper-cut loaded with a couple of hidden aces, not to mention a devastating cross ruff. Like most of the great battlers, he and Culbertson used to be sparring partners in past years, but they were so uniformly victorious that by and by they couldn't find anybody to fight with. That's when they separated and began to develop systems of their own, strictly rival systems, though some people say they can't tell the difference.

• • • •

CULBERTSON is more like Max Baer—very gabby. He has 47 distinct ways of insulting his opponents or anybody else who happens to excite his ire, and uses them all in the clinches. He can do it in several languages, too. Born in Russia, he brought back to this country a tremendous bridge reputation and a lot of European finesse which shows in his strategy. He is the apostle of taking a chance and once in a while overswings and lands on his nose. He fancies himself and his system to an extreme degree and wouldn't recognize an inferiority complex if he saw one showing off in Macy's window. Bridge, which he teaches, expounds in books, syndicates to newspapers and jazzes up by every method known to Barnum, has brought him in a handsome fortune. The betting favors Culbertson.

Each team has been handicapped under the terms of the contract in what seems almost a cruel and inhuman manner. The two wives are not allowed to say a word except what pertains strictly to the game. This narrows the wisecracks and the getting heavy down to the men, both of whom, however, are unusually equipped for that function. A little feminine fencing would undoubtedly have pleased the kibitzers, who are already beginning to complain that this "enfamille" match is too amicable. If any of the players are late they have to pay a fine of $5 a minute and there are many other penalties in the 16-page brochure of rules drawn up for the occasion. So far the late Mr. Culbertson has been separated from 25 smackers.

Sims and his wife walked into the opening session in street clothes and the Culbertsons promptly drew blood by showing up in evening dress. The first hand, however, proved that even the gods nod. Culbertson played his right through without discovering until the last trick that he only had 12 cards in his mitt. The thirteenth was found on the floor. This ought to buck up all those accursed and tormented souls who have trumped their partner's ace, or bid two on a grand slam.

EVERY one who isn't a dirty dog himself has considerable assimilation for good dog stories. Here is one about a dog who lives over in Virginia not far from Washington. Your correspondent can vouch for it, because Josephine, its heroine, is the daughter of Delilah, your correspondent's wire-haired, who got fatally entangled with the wheels of a careless and callous motorist on Connecticut avenue.

The house in which Josephine lives faces on a road along which there is considerable, though not continuous, automobile traffic. Not long ago there was a happy event in Josephine's career and she gave birth to a litter of pups. Recently her mistress observed some strange behavior on the part of Josephine and her yapping family.

Carrying each pup separately, Josephine would deposit them all in the ditch beside the road near the front gate. Then she would select one of the pups and place him in the middle of the road and wait there to see that he kept in position. Finally, when she heard an automobile approaching from either direction, Josephine would hunch and hustle the pup into the ditch.

Josephine repeated this process with each pup in turn. It went on for days and days. Now all the pups know enough to keep out of the way of passing cars. Is that instinct, or intelligence, or just mother love conquering all things?

IN New York pigeons do the work of the starlings in Washington. Only there aren't so many of them and they don't roost in trees, even if there were many trees to roost in. As this means no twigs and no leaves it is obvious the pigeons are sometimes up against it for nest material. Since the depression began, there must have been lots of white collar pigeons in New York without a place to lay their eggs. One pair has been discovered, however, which solved its problem strictly in the bourgeois tradition.

This couple built their nest of paper clips gathered from window sills where they had been scattered by stenographers. In fact, they built two nests, one of which was washed out by a storm. But the second nest bravely reposes on a ledge just outside a midtown advertising agency and it has an Easter egg in it. It wouldn't seem that wire clips poked together would make a particularly comfortable mattress for a pigeon chick, but one has to leave those things to the pigeons. Pigeons are pretty smart birds. The passing of the horse confronted them with a nutritive crisis which they met by becoming panhandlers. Now there is a small army of volunteer bread crumb distributors and the park department dispenses several hundred tons of grain a year. This is pie for the pigeons.

WITH only 14 hurdy-gurdies dispensing melody to all New York, it now looks like another springtime delight is about to succumb to a chill bureaucracy, the heart of which, if any, leaps not to the robin's return. This is the perambulating carousel whose prancing steeds and wheezing organ added gayety to the congested streets of the East Side.

Sabastino Spina has a carousel on a truck. When Sabastino bought it the sole motive power for the ponies was a hand crank. But he has tinkered with it until now its little cast-iron horses pursue their appointed rounds by electricity. American and Italian flags flutter from its sap-green top, delightful tunes gush from its organ pipes, and children love it. Sabastino charges them only a penny a ride and if business just gets a little better his electric carousel, of which he is so proud, will turn him in as much as a dollar a day. He needs it, too, because he has a wife and two children to support.

But the stern city fathers say he can't operate his carousel until he pays a $60 license fee. When the police took him to court Sabastino wanted to know where he was to get the $60 unless his carousel was to earn it for him. The court didn't know the answer to that question. Then Sabastino, in a fit of pique, offered the court the carousel. The court, being neither of a musical nor mechanical turn of mind, turned down the offer. Sabastino is sunk.

If the merry-go-round disappears, what is left? Only the official relief merry-go-round, which raises its own pay with every turn.

Another Cute Thing!

WHEN Prof. Tugwell becomes one of America's richest young men, as he will when Mr. Roosevelt divides his $5,000,000,000 legacy with him, one of the cutest things he will do is the erection of the ever-filled granaries on the farms. His original plans for making over whatever part of the country he got his hands on didn't include the granaries because at the time the professor and his fellows' thoughts were intent upon turning under grain and pigs and not upon saving anything to put in an ever-filled granary.

BARGERON.

But on page 432 of the professor's book on how the country should be run it says that in the event of a drought the turning under of pigs and grain should be discontinued and ever-filled granaries set up instead. This flexibility of the plan is what commends it more than anything else.

• • • •

At first blush one would think the necessity for these granaries would throw the professor's plan out of order. But such is not the case at all. In his original plan he had provided for the taking over of submarginal lands. These were to be made into parks and as nearly every farm of any size has a submarginal strip the prospects were for every one of them having a park.

Manifestly, however, the submarginal strip is the proper location for the ever-filled granary. Well, you can readily see how inefficient it would be to place a granary on cultivatable land and then make a park of an adjoining submarginal strip. The farmer would have to plow around the granary in circles, which, when opposed to the parallel rows of the well-ordered farm, would make an awful sight.

The place for the granaries being established clearly, then it was only necessary for the professor in reforming his plans to go over them and in a spot where he had marked 200 or 5 acres for a park he had only to place a little cross in the corner for an ever-filled granary.

• • • •

Inasmuch as the granaries are to be placed in the parks, however, their design will necessarily be different from what it would have been had they been placed on the farms proper. A tank-like thing painted in bright red would suffice for a granary on the farm proper.

The park is something where the farmer can go for recreation and fresh air where he can sit on park benches, feed squirrels, float toy boats and otherwise enjoy the pleasures of the city slicker. There is a serious determination to place the city and the farm on a parity.

Well, the farmer wouldn't want to be sitting in the park on a hot afternoon resting from his work in the fields and have his eyes come across a gawky, red-hued tank. He would think he was back on the farm instead of in the city park, which is the effect sought to be given him.

• • • •

The granary, it becomes apparent, must be something of very tasteful design. Perhaps it can be done in apartment or group-dwelling style, the entrance to face the farm and a false lintel front given to it. The former could pour his surplus grain in the rear entrance and then walk around to the front and get the impression he was about to enter a regular city home. This, it is believed, would do much toward dissipating the entry which the farmer has for the city slicker, though it is in no wise, of course, intended to dissipate the envy which the city slicker has for the farmer. That is the NRA's job, and one for which the professor has utter contempt. His heart is with the tiller of the soil.

Atop the granaries there is thought of placing swimming pools. The old swimmin' holes are likely to go in the making-over process. They are not looked upon as up-to-date, but rather as a mushy sentiment of the past. And until we shake off this past we are not to make progress toward the more abundant life. Around the swimming pools will idle, in all likelihood, bathing beauties drawn from the ranks of Broadway's unemployed chorus girls and paid through a processing tax.

With the whole Mississippi Valley littered with swimming pools atop ever-filled granaries, and with languorous beauties, it will become as picturesque as Holland and its windmills—at least, as picturesque.

Hilton's "Terry"

By

Wm. Lyon Phelps

AFTER the success of Mr. James Hilton's novel, "Good-bye, Mr. Chips," came the success of his novel which had been published a year earlier, "Lost Horizon." These two books were among the best sellers of 1934—were, in fact, in the first five novels of that year.

There has been a natural curiosity on the part of readers to see Hilton's other novels, and as I have read nine of his books without finding one that was dull, I feel certain they will all, sooner or later, and sooner more probably than later, be republished both in England and in America. And I will remind you that any American bookshop can import any of these for you from England in case they have not yet appeared in the United States.

• • • •

I have just read "Terry," which was first published in 1927, seven years before its author became famous. It is a steadily interesting novel, and is important mainly because of its original hero, Dr. Terrington, whom his friends call Terry.

He is original in this—he is a research scientist, exclusively interested in his researches. This is what makes him so remarkable, because nearly all research scientists are not exclusively interested in their researches. They are quite naturally partly interested in the fame they hope to gain by their researches. Their ardor in the pursuit of truth is equaled by the ardor of their personal ambition.

Now, Terry is entirely without ambition. He has no love of himself at all. He is not even interested in himself. He is interested only in his studies. Finally, when he makes a great discovery and a prominent professor steals all the credit for it, Terry is not disturbed. He is happy that his discoveries turn out to have been correct. When his friends endeavor to make him share their fury at this injustice, he can not even make himself interested. "What difference does it make who gets the credit, so long as the world benefits from the discovery?"

Quite so, quite so—there speaks the man who is actuated solely by the love of research. How many of them do you know personally?

No wonder that a brilliant society woman falls in love with Terry; that is exactly what a brilliant society woman would do. Does she get him? Read the novel and you will find out.

And now I am going to read "Meadows of the Moon," also by James Hilton.

Amendments To AAA Described As Unsound

Observer Decries Powers Sought By Ineffective And Inexperienced Agency.

By Stanley F. Morse.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

CONGRESSIONAL hearings on the much-discussed amendments to the agricultural adjustment act seem to overlook the main issue of whether they are really needed. But before developing this thought, what are these amendments?

Their purpose is to confirm powers already granted to the Secretary of Agriculture by the agricultural adjustment act and to tighten his control over farmers and the handlers, distributors and processors of their products. The amendments would compel farmers' cooperatives and handlers or processors of farm commodities to operate under AAA licenses or be subject to a tie-up of business, legal and auditing expenses or fines.

Even farmers, apparently exempted, could be licensed as handlers, distributors or processors. Empowering the Secretary to "eliminate unfair practices or charges" would permit him virtually to take over the management of unwilling licensees with the cost of this supervision to be charged against them. "Fishing" and snooping investigations would be authorized by opening all books and records to the AAA.

Farmers' production would be controlled by assigning them quotas which could not be exceeded by licensed handlers or processors in their purchases from these producers. While the amendments seem to favor the farmers' cooperatives by according them "recognition and encouragement," actually their enactment would enable the AAA to take over complete control of the handling, distribution and marketing of all farm products and practically eliminate the need for cooperatives. To climax this program, provision would be made for imitating the highly impractical "ever-normal granary" scheme originated by Joseph, on a small scale, in Bible times.

• • • •

IN asking for additional powers, the administrator of the AAA has insisted before the Senate and House Agricultural Committees that most of the powers sought were already contained in the act, but that they should be more clearly defined to avoid legal controversies. However, he did not demonstrate satisfactorily that the record of the AAA to date justifies giving it almost dictatorial control over American agriculture. A brief analysis of some of the major AAA problems discloses unfavorable outcomes which may result in costly disasters.

The cotton program, including production curtailment and price pegging, has inside of two years seriously reduced the exports of American cotton, disrupted the cotton industry of the South to a greater extent than is yet realized, diminished domestic consumption so that many cotton mills are closing in North and South, stimulated competitive cotton production in foreign countries, increased unemployment and further accumulated stocks of cotton which will result in a loss to the Government.

Another fiasco is the Southern rice marketing agreement, which at first seemed to be successful in raising prices by price fixing, but within 18 months has increased the domestic carryover of rice from 148,000,000 pounds to 225,000,000, with an inevitable loss facing the growers, who hold most of this rice. As a sequel to this AAA experiment, consumers must now shoulder the growers' loss, under a new amendment to the agricultural adjustment act just approved by the President, by having to pay a processing tax of 1 cent a pound. This will be used to compensate the growers for the losses they will incur in disposing of this rice at lower world prices. A painful feature of economic planning is thus revealed—that unsuccessful ventures in the field must be paid for by the innocent bystanders (consumers).

• • • •

OTHER unfavorable reactions of AAA projects might be cited, such as the consumer resistance to high pork prices, with a possible permanent shift to other foods, as a reflection of hog reduction; the increased imports of corn and duty-free starches resulting from decreased corn production, and uncertainty as to whether the disproportionately higher prices of food and clothing will be balanced by increased industrial activity. Even if this brief experience with economic short-cuts is inadequate, the history of such devices in foreign countries should be considered. Rubber, sugar and coffee are classic examples of the usual effects of Government-aid measures, which produce unforeseen dislocations often more harmful than the troubles they were designed to cure.

Another vital fact emerging from a detailed study of the AAA program is that, at least with cotton, tobacco and butter, the roseate national recovery plans for better farm markets and higher prices early in 1933 encouraged materially increased planting and production. Then, to reduce these surpluses which it had created, the agricultural adjustment program functioned in reverse gear.

Surely, if the major programs of the AAA are already proving unworkable and perhaps injurious to the national economy, there is no point in authorizing this agency to inaugurate new experiments which can result only in further upsetting American agriculture and related industries. If the AAA were an experienced, practical economic or business organization, such ventures might be undertaken. But it appears to many that the AAA is primarily a political organization set up in an attempt to carry out the New Deal promises made to the farmers. Its plans must be made and money paid out with a view to pleasing the voters and keeping its personnel in their jobs. Its policies and decisions, instead of being based on sound scientific and economic principles, must be dictated by political expediency.

Nevertheless, even if the AAA were not a semipolitical organization, it still would not possess enough practical business ability and experience to justify entrusting it with control of agriculture and kindred industries. Both Secretary Wallace and Administrator Davis have testified in the congressional hearings that the extraordinary powers asked for would be held as "reserve powers" to be used only in case of emergency. Yet it must be evident that such a bureaucracy as the AAA might come under the control of unscrupulous politicians who would not hesitate to use such powers to further unadvertised ends. Or, assuming that the AAA could operate successfully and carry out its plans, there still would be the potent objection that Government control gradually would destroy the initiative, ambition and development of the very individuals it was designated to help and would "freeze" the agricultural industry into a condition of atrophy.

• • • •

OUTSIDE of the control-increasing provisions of these amendments the "ever-normal granary" scheme is perhaps the most fallacious. Its first assumption is that by purchasing and storing huge supplies of grains and other staples the Government could safeguard the Nation against disastrous crop failures and at the same time stabilize the prices of farm commodities.

That Government-owned stores of such reserves is unnecessary is indicated by the weather records which show that droughts like the present one are very rare. Government weather experts have discovered definite weather cycles of varying intensity and place the present drought in a cycle which would bring another similar dry period in 1988. So, in case of unexpected crop shortages, it would be easier and cheaper to import needed food supplies.

Furthermore, farmers would not like to have the Government try to stabilize prices by giving them commodities in years of scarcity, as they count on occasional short crops and higher prices to offset the lower prices of abundant crops.

With the ever-normal granary scheme seen to be both unnecessary and commercially unsound, and the additional powers desired by the AAA clearly unwarranted by its character and results, it is unthinkable that Congress will lightly approve the proposed amendments to the agricultural adjustment act.

The Dance Recruits.

("Eighty-seven Bankers Now Exercise by Dancing! Says One, 'I didn't warm up to the idea of going to a dancing school until I found all my friends were doing it. And how my dancing has pepped up.'" —From a dancing school advertisement.)

Eighty-seven bankers in their dancing shoes,
Eighty-seven bankers shaking off the blues;
See 'em dip and pivot, bankers fat or lank,
Knowing there is nothing doing at the bank;
Watch 'em glide serenely all about the hall,
Not a care to fret them, not a care at all!
Eighty-seven bankers busy as can be
Dancing while they're waiting for Recovery.

Eighty-seven bankers rushing off to school
Eighty-seven playboys from a bankers' pool;
See their happy faces, free from all concern—
Roosevelt forgotten as they twist and turn!
My, how smooth and graceful! My, how lithe and gay!
(At the bank placard, "Won't be back today.")
Eighty-seven bankers, not one sad or blue—
Happy to discover something they can do!

First they didn't warm up very, very much;
They at first appeared to lack the dancing touch;
They were rather chilly, feeling ill at ease
Till they saw their friends there swaying in the breeze;
But they quickly got it, humming, "What the hell!
Nothing doing banking, so we might as well!"
Eighty-seven bankers—see 'em step and wheel!
How it helps to shake off Roosevelt's New Deal!

How their dancing peps up! How their faces glow
As they dance divinely heighdee-heighdee-ho!
At the banks it's deadly, deadly as can be,
Just an awful waxworks, all solemnity;
No one puts in money, no one takes it out—
(Even bold bank robbers are no more about!)
Life has grown so palling at a bank today
Dancing helps a banker pass the time away!

Ah, the drab existence in the marble tombs!
Even those who bank there get the deepest glooms;
Once they rang with laughter; there was spirit there;
Bankers moved with gusto; there was pep to spare.
Now a deathly silence; nothing to be done;
Not a ray of sunshine, not a bit of fun . . .
Mabel, clear the dance hall! Quick, for pity's sake!
Let the Nation's bankers get a little break!

Peace Meeting Brings No Peace In AAA Battle

George Still Presses Fight for Amendment After Seeing Wallace.

By the Associated Press.

With alterations affecting the AAA at its center, the feud between Senator George (Democrat), Georgia, and Secretary Wallace blazed last night, only slightly abated by a heart-to-heart talk by the two.

While the House Agriculture Committee was approving an extension of the AAA's powers and the Senate making a significant change in the method of collecting the cotton processing tax, the two got together in Wallace's office in a partially successful effort to compose their differences.

Behind their dispute lay these developments:

George attached to the works relief bill an amendment permitting, though not directing, the payment of farmers' benefits from the measure's $4,880,000,000 fund.

Calls Meeting Pleasant.

Wallace was widely reported to have asserted such an arrangement would enable the farmers to "dip their hands into the United States Treasury."

On the Senate floor on Thursday George charged the Cabinet officer with making "irresponsible" statements and asserted he was "unfit" for the office he holds. Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, joined him in his attack.

Representative Gifford (Republican), Massachusetts, quoted Wallace yesterday as assuring him there was no immediate likelihood of an increase in the cotton processing tax. The agriculture secretary in a press conference Wednesday said there was greater possibility of an increase than of a lowering of the tax.

After yesterday's talk with the Agriculture Secretary, George reported:

"We had a pleasant meeting and arrived at a clearer understanding. We both have the same objective—stabilizing the cotton market—and are trying to work out a common basis of action."

Peace Parley Fails.

"Were you successful?" he was asked.

"No; but we understand each other better."

The Georgian was reluctant to discuss the personal implications of his disagreement with Wallace, intimating the Agriculture Secretary felt he had been misquoted. He made it obvious that he still was dissatisfied.

Although Wallace was known on good authority last night to be still opposed to the George amendment, it became evident that the AAA would not fight it actively on Capitol Hill. A feeling existed at the Agriculture Department that an open fight would prove more harmful than allowing the amendment to stay in the relief bill.

Tax Change Provided.

More than one official said there was hope of protecting President Roosevelt against too great pressure to make benefit payments from the work-relief fund. This could mean that the collection of processing taxes, intended to finance such payments, and the financial bulwark of AAA, might be allowed to lapse.

The Senate's proposed change in collecting the processing tax on cotton came in connection with passage of the annual appropriation bill for the Agriculture Department, providing $126,000,000 for its use in the next fiscal year.

Under the amendment adopted, the tax would be collected when the cotton manufacturer sells the finished article instead of as at present when the raw cotton is delivered at his mill.

"This arrangement is exceedingly unfair for the manufacturer may have no market at all for months, and meanwhile he is out the money paid in processing taxes," said Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina.

Mills May Close, Report.

"It must be admitted that this is a sales tax and should be levied like all sales taxes when the sale is made. It is especially important now."

He said many mills are threatened with closing down because of lack of orders, throwing thousands out of employment, and added that under the circumstances it would be "especially unfortunate" if the mills had to pay the processing taxes in advance of sale.

The House Agriculture Committee yesterday approved the much-buffeted amendment to the act with a new provision for encouraging exports of farm commodities. This is an authorization for the appropriation of 30 per cent of gross customers receipts to be put in a separate fund to use for encouraging exportation of agricultural products.

Nebraska Convicts Senator Kaspar

Found Guilty of Receiving Stolen Property.

By the Associated Press.

Wahoo, Nebr., March 29.—State Senator Joseph F. Kaspar was convicted today of a charge of receiving stolen property, by a jury which had deliberated 11 hours.

The State charged Kaspar received $1,200 worth of property hijacked from a truck last June, but because only a washing machine valued at $54 was introduced in evidence, the judge ruled the jury limit property involved to that amount.

The conviction carries a penalty of from one to seven years in the penitentiary. Sentence was deferred when attorneys said an appeal would be sought.

Kaspar testified he did not know the merchandise was stolen and that he was threatened with death by gunmen if he told of their activities.

Kaspar, a 59-year-old physician from Prague, Nebr., said he did not know whether he would resign from the State Senate.

New Deadlock Blocks Action On Relief Bill

Revisions in Conference Provoke Storm of Protest.

that this is a work-relief bill, and such a loan would not create work.

It was learned that Glass and other Senate conferees fought to increase the 33 1-3 labor requirement to 50 per cent, but were outvoted.

Administration officials argued yesterday that a number of contemplated projects might be forced out of the program by the one-third direct labor requirement.

Slum clearance projects, for example, involve only a 28 per cent direct labor cost, it was pointed out, while in grade crossing and rural electrification undertakings, where the cost of materials is important, only 30 per cent is spent on labor. Non-Federal projects, of a character financed by PWA, involve on an average of only 33 per cent for direct labor expenses.

Under the conference report as agreed on, none of the money earmarked in the bill for other purposes (and there are eight broad classifications), could be loaned to the States, conferees said. Representative, James P. Buchanan, of Texas, head of the House conferees, vainly sought to add an amendment making loans or grants possible under each class of work. On this basis, he argued, a large percentage of the money might be repaid to the Treasury.

Oppose Revolving Fund.

He was voted down. Other conferees took the stand that the purpose was work relief, and not to set up a revolving fund. One Senator pointed out that the RFC and other agencies have the power to make loans.

House conferees also were unsuccessful in an effort to write into the bill a separate section authorizing the President to delegate to any Federal department, any of the powers given to him under the legislation.

Administration stalwarts received another bad jolt in failure of conferees to provide specifically for certain favored undertakings. In an advisory ruling, the Comptroller General has held that "rural industrial communities" and "subsistence homesteads" of the type now in operation at Reedsville, W. Va., do not appear to come within the appropriation.

So two new amendments were offered. One would have included in the rural rehabilitation earmarking, funds for "rural housing, rural industrial communities, subsistence homesteads, prosecution of work relief programs to provide supplementary incomes to destitute persons, acquisition of submarginal agricultural lands, acquisition of farm land and necessary equipment of farmers, land tenants, croppers and farm laborers."

Second Amendment.

The second proposed amendment would have listed under the rural electrification classification "projects for generation, transmission or distribution of electrical energy in rural areas, including contiguous small communities where electrical energy is not available."

Confrerees rejected these two amendments, although both are partally covered by language now in the bill.

It was said that the placement of a comma in an amendment requiring Senate confirmation of supervisory officers, may require the Senate to pass on such men as Tugwell, Hopkins, Ickes and others slated to direct the program. One member of the conference said this possibility arose in the discussions, but it was suggested the President might get around it by naming the men in an advisory capacity.

Filed Immediately.

Under a special consent agreement, the conference report was filed in the House immediately after it was completed, so it was impossible for the conferees to reconsider any of the changes they had made yesterday. Senate conferees held an informal meeting, but decided to stand pat.

Several parliamentary difficulties stood in the path of Representative Buchanan persuading the House to send the measure back to conference. Unanimous consent or outright rejection of the report would be required.

Buchanan last night had tentatively decided on permitting the House to approve the report when it comes up Monday. The report would then go to the Senate. Some Administration Senator, in that event, may make the point of order that conferees exceeded their authority. If his point is sustained, the bill would automatically go back to conference. With Senate conferees adamant for the report, there was a doubt such a move would succeed.

9 U.S. Women Presented At Second London Court; Brilliant Gowns Are Worn

Series Inaugurates the Silver Jubilee of King George.

Mildred McKinney, of Richmond, Is Among Those Presented.

Miss Stapleton, Capital Presentee, Wears White Satin.

Extreme Decollette Is Decreed for First of Royal Functions.

By the Associated Press.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

London, March 29.—Under the guidance of Mrs. Robert W. Bingham, wife of the American Ambassador, nine more American women were presented to King George and Queen Mary tonight.

The sparkling scene of fashion and ceremony was the second and last of the season's first series of royal courts, which combined to inaugurate fittingly the monarch's silver jubilee.

There were two tragic absentees in the list of Americans presented at Buckingham Palace.

Jane and Elizabeth Du Bois, daughters of the American consul general at Naples, Italy, had made arrangements to attend this month's court. Death intervened. Last month the sisters jumped hand-in-hand from an airplane speeding over the English countryside.

A coroner's jury decided they had committed suicide because of their grief over the death of two British flying officers who crashed in Sicily the week before.

List of Presentees.

The debutantes and matrons from the United States who executed the traditional double curtsey before the throne tonight are Miss Virginia Bell, of New York; Mrs. Maturin Livingston Delafield, of Hewlett, Long Island; Mrs. Dudley Dwyre, of Denver, Colo., wife of the American consul at London; Miss Mildred Booth McKinney, of Richmond; Miss Allison Osborne, of Illinois; Miss Joyce De Levis Prizer, of New York; Mrs. Harry G. Siedel, of Providence, R. I.; Mrs. T. Walter Seligman, of New York City, and Miss Elizabeth Tweedy, formerly of New Jersey.

King George again wore his scarlet uniform of colonel in chief of the Life Guards, the crack regiment of British cavalry, while the Queen appeared heavily bejeweled, wearing a gown of gold lame embroidered with crystal on gold net. Belfast lace over gold lame formed her train.

The Americans had the additional thrill of seeing the tall, bronzed Duke of Gloucester, who did not attend last evening's court because he was resting from his round-the-world trip, wearing the blue and gold uniform of a major of the Hussars.

The duke stood with the group of royalty, clustered around the twin golden thrones.

Americans' Costumes.

For this evening's ceremony the Americans followed the strict instructions as to costume laid down by the Lord Chamberlain. They wore:

Miss Bell—A picture frock of ivory net over an ivory bodice of shimmery satin, with full fichu draped shoulders and skirt graduated in handtucks from the waist to the hem, the train of gored net over satin; matching slippers; a bouquet of white carnations and freesias; tiara a dainty wreath of crystal flowers; a pearl necklace.

Miss McKinney—A Lelong model picture ivory faille gown with short puffed sleeves falling off the shoulder; skirt of straight lines ruched at the waist and back forming a bustle; a faille train embroidered in a moon and star design with tiny silver sequins; a diamante tiara and pearl necklace; a green feather fan.

Miss Osborne—A modern robe de style of creamy pearl-tinted satin, with a train of silver lame tinted with pearl, lined with ruched chiffon; a feather fan.

Mrs. Dwyre—A gown of blue and silver cloth, with train of lame; white feather fan; white gloves and shoes.

Gown of Brocaded Lame.

Mrs. Siedel — A Reville model gown of rose pink and silver brocaded lame, corsage draped; a long sash of silver lame; court train of brocaded lame lined with silver-woven lame; a diamond tiara, diamond bracelet, double pearl necklace.

Miss Tweedy—A picture gown of tulle over silver lame; matching train; a feather fan.

Mrs. Delafield—A pink satin gown draped in Grecian style, sash of rose velvet; train of pink satin; silver shoes; no jewels.

Miss Prizer—A silver and white brocade tunic dress, skirt widening at the hem; train of same material; bodice plain with V-necked straps; a diamond brooch.

Miss Stapleton, debutante daughter of Mrs. Daniel C. Stapleton, represented Washington, and a lovely representative she was. She wore a handsome gown of white satin, fashioned on long princess lines, with the prescribed court train, also of white satin, and lined with silver tissue. Her three white feathers were caught in her dark hair with a narrow bandeau of diamonds and she carried a large fan of pale pink tulle to which was fastened sprays of orchids and gardenias.

Brilliant Display of Gowns.

The beautiful display of gowns was very brilliant. Extreme decollette was de rigeur for the season's first court, held several weeks earlier than in past years, because of the many festivities attendant to the golden jubilee of the reign of King George and Queen Mary, which will occupy the remainder of the spring season in London. The lord chamberlain laid down the law to matrons and debutantes, insisting that costume regulations, sometimes ignored or slighted in the past, be strictly observed.

A few elderly women who feared catching cold were allowed to wear gowns with high necklines, the rest were decollete, many having the off-the-shoulder necklines.

Full length trains, the traditional three feathers in the headdress and jewelry, were also decreed, the latter giving court jewelers an opportunity to evolve new styles in the increasingly popular tiara.

Mrs. Robert Worth Bingham, wife of the United States Ambassador to London, who presented the Americans to the King and Queen, wore a picturesque period gown of dull French blue taffeta, the skirt bouffant with panels of blue and silver lace, and the yoke finished with pink satin revers. There was a bouquet of pink roses at the waistline, and the court train of blue and silver lace was fastened at the shoulders with diamond clips.

Mrs. Straus Wears Lame.

Mrs. Jesse Isador Straus, wife of the United States Ambassador to France, was in a gown of ice blue and silver lame fashioned on pencil-slender lines, with the skirt flaring slightly at the hemline. Her train was of the same material.

Mrs. James Somerville, jr., wife of the Assistant Commercial Attache of the United States Embassy in London, was another presentee, and wore a gown of silver lame cut on classical lines. Her train of silver was lined with chiffon and she carried an ostrich feather fan. Mrs. Somerville has recently returned to London after spending some time in Washington and Birmingham, Ala.

Miss Carolyn Nash, of Cartersville, Va., wore white and silver brocade with a train of silver cloth, and carried a white feather fan.

Mrs. Gaspar Bacon, of Jamaica Plain, Mass., wore a gown of pale turquoise blue faille modeled on simple lines with a full skirt. Her train was of velvet to match the gown and was lined with silver. She carried a fan of blue feathers. Others who were presented Thursday were Mrs. Medley C. B. Whelpley, of Greenwich, Conn.; Miss Mary Pye Hutcheson, of Houston, Tex., and Miss Jean Millet, of New York.

Last evening the second drawing room of the season was held with the same pomp and ceremony which attended the first court.

Penalty Doubles.

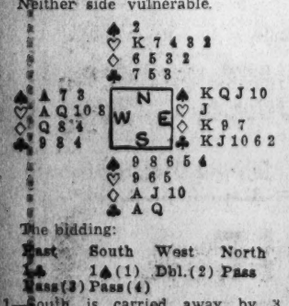
The penalty double of a low adverse contract offers more profit possibilities than any other bidding situation. This is because of an apparently irresistible temptation to get into the bidding no matter how unsound the overcall, and it is true even of players whose long experience should have taught them better.

In expert games you will find this double used with great freedom and flexibility—and partaking of none of the "Hands off, partner" inviolability with which some players demand their business doubles be treated.

"Cooperative" Doubling.

Today's hand from the recent Grand National Championship of the United States Bridge Association shows the use of the penalty double at a low contract by Richard L. Frey, leading player of 1934, and an ardent advocate of "cooperative" doubling.

East, Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.



The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1♣	1♠ (1)	Dbl. (2)	Pass
Pass (3)	Pass (4)

1—South is carried away by 3 honor-tricks and a five-card suit.
2—Careful analysis convinces West that the hope of game by his side depends solely on East's having an unbalanced distribution—or (for a no-trump game) some strength in spades. Yet West must take immediate action on his fine hand. He doubles, certain that with a freak East will rescue, and that if East holds spade strength the set will be as much or more than game is worth.
3—Gazing in some surprise at 100 honors in the suit his partner has doubled.
4—No place to go.

The Play

South won the club opening with the Queen, cashed the Ace, and then led the heart 5. West took this with the Ace, noted the fall of East's Jack, but decided to lead his last club which South trumped. Another heart was led and East trumped dummy's King with his King of spades, returning the ten to show his trump holding. This was followed by a club lead which South ruffed with the nine and West overruled with the Ace. The Queen of hearts was cashed. East discarding a diamond, and a trump lead enabled East to draw declarer's remaining spades and cash his good club. South still had to lose a diamond going down three tricks—450 plus 100 honors—550 points and a top on the board for East and West.

Reader Raises Question: Can Women Be Classified by Points of Compass?

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: Tell me frankly, Miss Haworth, do you think women from widely different parts of this country vary greatly as to personality, temperament, culture, social characteristics, and so on? I have been reading with mild interest and some mental reservations a series of articles currently running on your woman's page attempting to persuade us that they do. I wonder?

* * * *

The particular groove in which my life runs has brought me into contact the past quarter century with women from all sections of this country, representing both it's so-called middle class and upper stratas. And I am inclined to believe the difference between women is more one of blood and breeding (is that heresy in this democracy of ours?) than of geographical setting.

* * * *

I have known women from the deep South, from the frozen North, from the Western plains and from the Eastern seaboard who might have been blood sisters in their poise, decorum, sweetness, intelligence and adaptability. And I have, alas, seen the reverse side of the picture mirrored in representatives of these same geographical areas.

* * * *

I am not prepared to accept your able young writer's implied conclusion that because a woman is from the West she is perforce sincere, independent and open minded; that because she comes from below the Mason-Dixon line she revels in house party hospitality and exudes graciousness, tact and responsiveness; that because she is from New England she is highly intelligent, college-educated, circumspect and reserved; and that because she was reared in the East you will find her shellacked with poise and formality.

* * * *

I think it more likely you will find a dash of every one of these qualities in every well born or well reared woman, no matter what part of the country she comes from. What do you think, Miss Haworth?

COSMOPOLITE.

To Some Extent, Yes.

DEAR COSMOPOLITE: I think both you and the writer whose articles gave rise to the discussion are right to a certain extent. I believe there is an indisputable kind of similarity between women of brains and breeding from all points of the compass; and yet, I also believe that geographical conditions giving rise to certain traditional ways of living do leave their imprint upon the personality of successive generations of inhabitants. M. H.

"Dear Dissatisfied:"

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Expert Cites Romantic Side Of Needlepoint

Knitting Adds Femininity and Attracts Men, Miss Wolff Says.

YOU DON'T have to wear wide-brimmed hats, fluffy organdy frocks, and net capes to appear utterly feminine. Just work on a piece of needlepoint instead.

This is the advice of Miss Mary J. Wolff, nationally known needlepoint authority.

Yesterday she took time out between her lectures at Woodward & Lothrop's to point out some of the reasons why needlepoint was becoming a favorite indoor sport with American women.

"There's something so romantic about it," she said. "A woman working on a piece of needlepoint appeals strongly to men. She looks so peaceful, calm, and—well, sweet that she makes them feel big and strong and protective."

She Cites An Example.

"This may sound like a joke," Mrs. Wolff laughed, "but I've seen it proved. I remember a party in New York where there was one girl who sat nearly all evening working on her needlepoint and the men clustered around her like flies around honey!"

But, of course, there's more to needlepoint than its tendency to accentuate a woman's femininity, Miss Wolff pointed out.

"It develops graceful hands," she said, "but it does even more. It offers infinite opportunity for repose and relaxation. The woman who comes home dead tired will find that half an hour with her needlepoint makes her feel like a different person. It tones down her nerves, and, if I may speak figuratively, untangles the knots in her mind."

Needlepoint Is Simple.

Mrs. Wolff admitted that a great many women imagined needlepoint would be difficult. "But on the contrary, it's very simple," she said. "It's easy to learn, and even easier to do."

The young needlepoint authority has a long list of prominent persons who are interested in this type of creative work. A few of them are Queen Mary, the Prince of Wales, both the Duke and Duchess of Kent, Galli-Curci and Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, jr.

Islanders Keep Hats on in Lift; It Makes Room

Here's a new alibi for men who don't remove their hats in elevators. It has been learned in Australia that at least four more persons can be carried in an elevator during rush hours if men do not take off their hats.

As a result of this discovery the following sign has been placed in the seven elevators at the Bank of New South Wales, in Sydney:

"We would ask gentlemen to keep their hats on in the lifts. This will tend to reduce congestion during busy periods and so contribute to the greater comfort and convenience of all."

Independent Spirit Typifies Women Of the Middle West, Mrs. Mullen Says

Harris & Ewing.

The Middle Western woman is an achiever because she always says "I can," instead of "I can't;" she also is the best neighbor in the world, and possesses an informality founded on independence of character, says Mrs. Arthur Mullen, of Nebraska.

Self-Reliant Trait Is Legacy of Pioneers, Nebraskan Avers.

Just as standards of culture traditions and ideals vary in the North, South, East and West, so do the traits of the people. This is the last story of a series dealing with sectional personalities.

By Frances Mangum.

ONE OF the characteristics of the Middle Western woman is independence. When her husband takes the day for golf or is detained on business, she doesn't sit at home and mope and pine. She has interests of her own and participates in dozens of activities.

This is the opinion of Mrs. Arthur Mullen, wife of a prominent Democratic leader from Nebraska, and nationally prominent in club and civic activities.

"The women from the Middle West like to feel that they are able to look out for themselves," she said. "Not that a career is the end-all of their existence. Heavens, no! It's just that they take pride in meeting their own responsibilities. There's no tendency in them to be hothouse plants. They like to meet facts, overcome obstacles, and face the world with a feeling of freedom."

Mrs. Mullen believes that the traits of the typical Middle Western woman are directly traceable to her pioneer ancestors.

"Traditions o. the Settler."

"You'll find that the traditions are one with those laid down by the first settlers," she said. "There's still the same feeling of fellowship among people. In fact, you could almost say that Middle Westerners were one big family—and every man his brother's keeper.

"This all started with the pioneers who pushed their way across the plains in their covered wagons and ox-carts. Everyone was vitally interested in everyone else, and there was always a hearty welcome accorded these travelers when they reached a settlement. People were judged by what they could do, not by what they possessed or the kind of leaves on their family trees.

"It's the same today. A Middle Westerner will accept you as first rate until you prove yourself otherwise.

"Take the Middle Western hostess, for instance," she continued. "She's hospitable, gracious and sees to it there are no forlorn guests pushed to the background.

In Mrs. Mullen's opinion the Middle Western woman is the easiest person in the world to know, because she actually wants to know you, and wants you to know her."

"And another thing, women of this section are real go-getters," asserted Mrs. Mullen. "They're brought up to be that way. From the time they are children their parents tell them, 'you can do this,' and 'you can do that.' Never 'you can't.' As a result, they grow up with the feeling that the world is their own little oyster and difficulties and obstacles are not to block their way in the slightest.

Determined in Her Tasks.

"This trait is brought out in the manner in which the Middle Western woman undertakes her duties. No matter what she is assigned to do, she said, she'll do it if it can be done. Probably if it can't," she chuckled.

Mrs. Mullen believes that the woman of the Middle West is extremely adaptable both to circumstances and people.

"She can converse with all types of people because as a general thing the Middle Westerner keeps abreast of the times and has a broad scope of knowledge," she said.

"I've heard men say that it was a pleasure to see how intelligently Middle Western women can discuss a wide range of subjects. That's because they don't nurse the feeling that any one subject is a man's field. They consider themselves on the same conversational plane and talk as freely and intelligently to men as to women."

Referring to the matter of dress, Mrs. Mullen said she thought that Middle Western women as a whole were good dressers.

"They don't go in for extremes," she said, "and very seldom attempt to look like Paris fashion plates. But on the other hand, they abhor untidiness and dowdiness and make every effort to dress to suit the occasion."

"Aries."

IF MARCH 30 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 11:30 a. m. to 1:30 p. m., from 3:30 to 5:30 p. m. and from 7:30 to 9:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 9:30 to 11:30 a. m., from 1:30 to 3:30 p. m. and from 10:30 until midnight.

If you show your strength of character by refusing to be led into doing something you know you should not, you possibly will not only earn that friend's respect, but save your own. Pernicious gossip can cause a great deal of harm on this date, so be careful not to give idle tongues something to wag about.

If a woman, and March 30 is your birthday, the coming new year in your life probably will unfold for you many agreeable surprises. There is likely to be a most satisfactory clearing up of some puzzling questions. March 30 should bring you cause for rejoicing. A decided advantageous string of circumstances may do much to increase your happiness. Let an optimistic feeling brighten the date, and ignore any irritating incidents. It will pay to take as active a part, as is possible, in social affairs.

If a man, and March 30 is your natal day, you probably are both broad-minded as well as tolerant regarding the views of others. This liberality on your part will help you both in a business, as well as social way. Politics, law, medicine, writing, engineering, as well as educational work, may offer a line of activity for which you are best adapted.

Modiste Allays Tears of 'Flats'

New Shoe Styles Declared Suitable for Slim or Bulky Ankles.

EVER SINCE word got around that many of the best-looking spring and summer shoes would be flat-heeled, round-toed, almost childlike in appearance, women have been worrying. This extremely youthful footwear is fine for schoolgirls, of course. But what about the woman whose figure has begun to jell? What about the sleek, sophisticated young woman who goes in for spool heels?

Well, everybody may stop worrying. No matter whether your ankles have bovine tendencies or are as slim as soda straws, the new little-girl slippers will be kind to your feet and legs. Authority for this bit of cheer is Jeanne Grey, fashionist for J. & J. Slater, makers of women's shoes.

"The woman with plump ankles will look better in the new low-heeled slippers than in those fragile, high-heeled ones which make her seem top-heavy," said Miss Grey yesterday at the J. & J. Slater shop on Connecticut avenue. "And middle-aged women ought to sing a loud song of praise to the shoemakers for the new styles. They probably have been wearing 'sensible' shoes all along. Now they can wear flat-heeled slippers that are really smart. And they can look young, at least from the ankles down."

Naturally, there will be slippers this spring and summer with Cuban heels and high heels. But the very low ones are most fashionable. "Flats" is the name by which these new shoes, built close to the ground, are designated. For walking they can't be improved upon, but they have no place at garden parties or receptions.

"The woman who wants to be well dressed from head to foot," said Miss Grey, "will have 'flats' in her shoe wardrobe, but she'll also have spectator sports slippers, dressy afternoon pumps or straps and, of course, evening slippers."

For afternoon there's nothing better than patent leather pumps with cut steel buckles, in Miss Grey's opinion. Evening slippers may be spindly heeled or may be without any heels whatsoever.

All Are Urged To Learn Rules Of Life Saving

Rhythm Is Important in Applying Artificial Respiration.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

EVERYONE should know the principles of first aid and various groups now receive systematic training in this field. Policemen, firemen, electrical workers, public service employes, Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, and many others function with gratifying efficiency when life is at stake and when some simple first-aid practice may save it.

A person apparently drowned must have breathing restored. One who has inhaled carbon monoxide from automobile exhaust or who has been poisoned by opium (morphine) will require aid in continuing respiration. The same is true in cases of electric shock.

In the absence of a mechanical respirator, or when quick removal to a nearby hospital is impossible, some one must undertake artificial respiration. The method is simple and easily remembered. The plan proposed by Henry Robert Silvester is considered the best, and the steps in the procedure are as follows:

1. Using the forefinger, remove quickly from the mouth mucus, food, and all foreign material, including dental plates.

Bring Lower Jaw Forward.

2. Bring the lower jaw forward by placing the fingers at the angle of the jaw just below the ears and pressing toward the chin. This may be done by an assistant and the jaw held in that position. The head is turned to one side to allow saliva to flow out of the mouth, and the tip of the tongue is grasped between the folds of a handkerchief and drawn outside of the teeth. An assistant, if available, may hold the tongue.

3. A flat, folded garment or blanket may be placed under the back, reaching from the neck to the buttocks, and the body should lie perfectly flat, with no thick rolls under the shoulders or the middle of the back.

4. The movements of respiration are begun by forcing air into the the lungs and not out of them. The operator crouches behind the patient's head on one knee. Bending forward, he grasps the patient's arms at the elbows so that his thumbs are in the bend and his fingers on the back.

5. The arms are then drawn upward, backward and downward until the elbows touch the ground above and beside the head. After two seconds in this position the arms are moved back in the same manner, bringing the elbows together over the front of the body near the end of the breastbone, at which point gentle pressure on the chest is made. After a lapse of two seconds the operation is repeated.

Avoid Pressure on Abdomen.

6. If oxygen is available (garage, hospital, welding establishment or dental office may have small tanks of oxygen), it may be given with each inspiration.

7. Under no circumstances should any pressure be made on the abdomen.

The movements must be timed carefully. The number of artificial respirations per minute should not exceed 15. In fact, a slower rate is recommended. It may be necessary to continue the procedure for an hour or longer, and this frequency will not tire the operator. Many rescues have been affected by persistence. The method should be tried out with some one timing the movements in order to acquire the sense of rhythm. Although the first impression will be that the movements are entirely too slow, remember that 15 per minute is the maximum.

Caution is offered against the rough application of any type of artificial respiration. The movements should be firm and regular, but gentle. Because of the congestion of the heart and the liver in an asphyxiated individual, rupture of the latter organ sometimes occurs if the method employed is too vigorous and if much pressure is exerted.

Furniture Buying Is Made Easy by Unique Plan

Planned Rooms Shown in Presentation of Sloane Co.

Feature Gives Purchaser Definite Idea of Effect.

WOULDN'T IT BE the saving grace of many a furniture purchase if a woman could see her furniture laid out as it would look in her own home before she bought it? This feature has been made possible through the unique furniture presentation plan which has just been introduced by the W. & J. Sloane Co.

History is simply repeating itself in these rooms which have been designed to give Washington women an authentic reproduction of every period of furniture. There is no longer the problem of trying to decide between a Dutch Colonial or a Duncan Phyfe dining rom suite of furniture by merely seeing them first all huddled together in a corner of one large room. Now every period of furniture occupies a spacious room of its own.

It is not merely the fact that the furniture has been separated according to its period that makes this new system so effective. Each room according to the period represented by the furniture has been given every possible consideration as to background and hangings. For example, if a woman wishes to consider living room furniture, she is whisked up to the floor devoted entirely to living rooms and then her exploring begins. First of all she sees a room done in the Early American influence, then in the Early Colonial, and so on until she has made a complete circle of history according to the periods of furniture. All these reproductions are authentic and have been created in W. & J. Sloane's own craftsman shop.

Each room expresses the period of furniture in the wall coverings, floor coverings, drapes and other accessories. Thus she can visualize to a marked extent the effect that each piece of furniture would create in her own home. The gay printed pattern on the walls of the Early American room is designed to carry out the characteristics of the furniture of that period, as are the ruffled curtains and simple drapes. These features will be of great help in convincing a woman as to the appropriateness of her selection in furniture.

Living rooms are not the only ones designed to help the woman who is buying furniture. There is a complete group of bedrooms and dining rooms, and another group devoted to porch and garden furniture, and still another to rugs. Even lamps occupy a small corner of their own. Few of us realize that in choosing a small accessory such as a lamp that it, too, has been designed to represent a certain period in furniture.

The arrangement is not the only important feature of such a grouping of furniture. The special selection of backgrounds, drapes, etc., show how the color scheme may be worked out in an effective contrast. Every room must be accented by some contrasting bit of color, and this may be visualized in the clever way in which the furniture and backgrounds have been selected to meet this need.

Here we have a dining room that expresses the Georgian period in every detail. Not only the furniture is an authentic reproduction of the Georgian period, but the spaciousness of the room, the scenic background above the white paneling of the walls, the crystal candelabra and the luxurious rug all are reminiscent of the Georgian period.

Delicate Rouge Greets Spring With a Blush

Soft, Lovely Color Gives the Touch of Youth to Go With Season.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

IN THE SPRING a woman's fancy turns—and not so lightly to thoughts of lovely clothes. She is thrilled with jaunty plaid sandals and irresistible black and white ties. Hats—here now in all colors and styles, are rightfully going to her head, and, figuratively speaking, the redincotes and gay-checked suits are brimming over with dress appeal.

If you are one of those filled with the spring wardrobe fever be warned: Don't concentrate so closely on clothes that you forget your face! You know a change of seasons always sees a slight change of complexion, so you want to give yourself the once over and decide whether or not your winter rouge isn't a bit dull looking?

With your fresh new clothes and bright new hats you'll need a rouge that gives a natural bloom to your cheeks and emphasizes the sparkle in your eyes. Or didn't you know that rouge affected the eyes? It does, quite strongly. Applied high on the cheeks it makes the eyes look larger and livelier. And the right color rouge applied properly will give the stamp of youth to your face.

We have a rouge in mind. It's a soft lovely color that suits almost everybody, but is particularly appropriate for women with medium skin. Although it's called "light," it isn't a bit like the pale, dull rouges that frequently fall in the "light" category. You'll like it, first of all, because it may be worn with any color costume, and, secondly, because it's one of those lovely shades that is devoid of a purplish tinge.

Three-in-One Cream Arrives.

Many of the shoppers who inquired at a certain downtown store for the jar of cream divided into three sections and containing cleansing cream, nourishing cream and foundation cream were a little ahead of the time. Just at the last moment the manufacturers delayed shipment. At last they've come, however, and those interested in seeing one of the cleverest, most convenient cosmetic hits of the season will find the newcomers displayed in the toilet goods department of a downtwon store.

Myriad Tufted Spreads.

Forty thousand two hundred and forty tufts went into the making of one of the summer spreads featured in a downtown store. Over 1,000,000 threads were clipped to form these tufts. And two hands did the work.

The deep rich spread which lent warmth and color to your bed during the winter must soon be packed away and a lighter, summery spread must take its place. You may look far and find nothing lovelier than these myriad tufted coverlets made in North Carolina and sold in Washington.

No matter what your color scheme is you'll very likely find no difficulty in selecting a spread to suit, for these come with white tufts against a background of peach, pink, beige, gold, blue, orchid and green. They're available in either single or double-bed sizes.

Scented Artificial Flowers.

To look at them you'd think they were real gardenias. You'll be convinced when you note their fragrance. You have to feel them to tell they are exquisitely made fabric flowers.

How many times have you thought that lovely artificial flowers should be scented? Perhaps you've sprayed them with your own perfume to make them seem more real. In this instance you buy the flower already perfumed with a gardenia scent.

You'll find these, neatly wrapped in cellophane, on the counter of a downtown store. They cost only 25 cents apiece.

Pattern For Boy's Shirt Is Strictly Regulation

Pattern No. 660.

WE DIDN'T know that so many women still made shirts for their young sons. But they do! And so, after many requests, here is a perfect pattern for a boy's shirt. It is strictly regulation, with attached collar, patch pockets, and sleeves pleated into cuffs.

Frankly, there is much to be said for making a supply of shirts for the youngster from 8 to 14. He needs so many. Shirts are washed so frequently, and rubbed so hard, that it pays to have them of good fabric, well sewed. A large instruction chart included with the pattern will help you with the first one or two. After that, you will wonder why you did not think of making his shirts long ago! This pattern is made in sizes 8 to 14. Size 10 requires 2 yards of 35-inch fabric, and ¾ yard interfacing.

When luke-warm, add yeast, which has been softened in warm water. Add graham flour, prunes and enough white flour to make a stiff dough. Knead until smooth and let rise until doubled in bulk. Cut down, shape into loaves and let rise again until doubled in bulk. Bake in a moderately hot oven (375 degrees F.) for 1 hour. Makes two medium-sized loaves.

2½ teaspoons baking powder
¾ teaspoon salt
1 egg
2-3 cup milk
1 teaspoon grated orange rind
1 tablespoon orange juice

Sift together the dry ingredients in one bowl and beat together the other ingredients in another bowl. Beat the liquid mixture into the dry, adding finally two tablespoons melted fat.

Half fill well greased muffin pans with the batter, and over the top sprinkle chopped blanched almonds and granulated sugar.

Bake 12 to 15 minutes in a hot oven (425 degrees F.).

Green Pea Griddle Cakes.

1 pint green or canned peas, boiled and mashed
1 pint milk
2 eggs, beaten light
1 teaspoon salt
1 rounded tablespoon butter
2 cups flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
Dash of pepper

Mash the peas while hot and add the butter, then the milk and the dry ingredients (sifted together), lastly the eggs, well beaten. Beat vigorously, then bake on a hot griddle.

Maryland Corn Bread.

1½ cups sifted corn meal
1½ cups milk
1½ teaspoons salt
2½ cups boiling water
2 eggs
2 teaspoons baking powder

Add salt to the meal, then pour slowly into the boiling water, stirring all the time. When slightly cooled, add milk and well beaten eggs, lastly the baking powder. Beat well. Put in a well greased pan and bake in a hot oven for 25 minutes. Serve immediately.

Hot Ginberbread.

½ cup fat
½ cup sugar
1 cup molasses
1 egg
3 cups sifted soft wheat flour
½ teaspoon soda
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon ginger
½ teaspoon cloves
½ teaspoon cinnamon
1 cup milk

Cream together the sugar and fat. Add the molasses and beaten egg. Sift together the dry ingredients and add to the mixture alternately with the milk. Bake in two shallow pans in a moderate oven for 30 to 40 minutes. Serve steaming hot with cream cheese.

THREE MEN AND DIANA

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

"I'LL TELEPHONE you. I'm going East for a while. I will be back, Di."

She wandered away from the window, looked at his books, and peeped into his bedroom, told him presently that he had grown to be a person.

"Thank you, Di."

"Would you like to know before you go East what I've come to think of you, Pete?"

"I—I think not. I hate to hurry you," Peter said, "but what about getting this infant home?"

He'd Take Her.

Diana's eyes were fixed on him; she said nothing.

"I'll drive you," Peter said, suddenly.

"To the city, you mean? Haven't you——" She smiled, raising her blue eyes. "You haven't anything else you want to do?"

"It happens—not," Peter said, briefly, and Diana laughed.

The car was parked in the empty Sunday street, and Peter took the sleeping child and went with him and Diana into the dim close odors of the house.

"Lay him right there on the bed—my beautiful, you're so sleepy!" crooned Diana. Then, throwing aside her own coat and hat, she turned to Peter, still with the air of the wind-blown, sun-browned child exhaustedly happy after a country day. "Stay and have scrambled eggs and cocoa?"

"It'd bother you,"

"Bother me! But Micky and I have to eat. We'd do it for ourselves, anyway. Cocoa and toast and applesauce—it's all here."

"Neal," Diana repeated, but this time in a dutifully pleased and welcoming tone. "I didn't know you were here! I expected you tomorrow."

"So I see," Neal commented, in a significant tone made topheavy by the fact that he had been drinking and was slightly unsure of his tongue.

"Only since yesterday," Diana answered, unalarmed and motherly. She cut two more slices, stacked what she had cut methodically.

"Diana did'n' tell me she was goin' to have the kid here this weekend——"

"I didn't know it, Neal," Diana put in, from the toaster.

Diana Babied Him.

"I was thinking I could take him back to Bayhead tonight," Peter suggested. "It's only about 40 minutes' run, I have the car here."

She engineered Neal to the bedroom; Peter could hear her murmuring, motherly voice in there; presently she came out with the child, established him in his pillows, resumed her supper preparations.

"You don't want me here, Di."

"Oh, stay, of course. Neal's alseep anyway. Listen!" Diana smiled, tipping her head toward the closed bedroom door, through which indeed came the sound of regular snoring.

"Is he—is he often like this?"

"Not so often." Diana was pouring cocoa; she took Mickey on her knee, kissed the top of his head between bites.

"Why don't you let me take Micky back to Bayhead tonight, Di? Wouldn't that make it easier for you?"

"Oh, no—no—no! He'll be all right here. Neal will sleep all night; he's completely all in."

"He looks rotten."

Peter finished his cocoa, finished his cigarette, shook himself into his big coat.

"Anything I can do for you—get you?"

"Not a thing. Wait a minute," Diana said, harking, "who's that?"

"What?"

"Listen, don't you hear it? Somebody asking for Neal——"

She went to the door of the hall, disappeared for a moment; Peter could hear her say, "He lives here. But I'm not sure he's in."

A woman laughed cheerfully, "I know he's here. I'm Deidre Dean. We drove up together this morning!"

"Oh-h-h-h. Then of course——" Diana led the way into her stuffy little drawing room, with its lace curtains and cloth plants.

"Wait a minute, "Diana said. She went to the bedroom door, found that Neal was awake, scowling suspiciously toward the voices in the sitting room." Neal, Miss Dean is here," she told him.

"Well, you've just got to get rid of her. Tell her I'm sick!"

"Neal, she'll hear you. Don't—don't be so rude. Brush your hair and come out."

"The way that brother of yours treats me!" she said.

"Brother?" Diana echoed, glancing at Peter.

"Neal is my husband," she managed to explain. "I'm—but of course, I'm his wife."

There was a silence during which the words died slowly on the air.

"Diana left him, divorced him—don't deny it," the actress accused her sharply, still in a quick, frightened whisper. "Five—more than five years ago——"

"We met last year. We were remarried," Diana explained.

"He wouldn't lie to me like that!"

Before either spoke again, Neal came from the bedroom.

"Hello, Deedee," he said heartily. But Diana knew that he was frightened. He was like a big, uneasy boy, for all his handsome bigness, as he came out.

"You've been lying to me, Neal," Deidre began, panting.

"I had to tell you something, didn't I?"

"I and he were going to be married next month!" Deidre said, catching eagerly at her sympathy.

"I'm sorry," Diana said briefly, her face white with anger and distaste.

He went quickly into the bedroom; appeared again. Deidre screamed, and Diana turned very pale.

"Don't be a fool, Tressady," Peter said sharply. "Put down that gun!"

"Stay where you are!" Neal said. "It's like in a movie——" Diana thought. "Micky here—he might kill—oh, my God, it's a revolver——"

"I've wanted to end it for a long time," Neal was saying, in a silky, in what was almost a singsong, voice. "Deedee knows 'at, don't you, Deedee? But I told you you were going to, didn't I? Less all go, hay? Less all quit, 'n then we can't quarrel any more——"

"Put it down, Neal, you're frightening us!" Diana commanded.

"Stay back!" Neal ordered her, backing himself against the kitchen door. Deidre, who had halfway risen, fell upon him with a shriek; they stumbled down together. Diana heard the sharp clean voice of the revolver; then there was silence.

Then Diedre rose from the jumble that had been Diedre and Neal, and Neal, in his quilted dressing gown, toppled slowly from the kneeling position in which her body had held him, slid to the rug and lay still.

"There—you bluffer! You bluffer, that's the time you got it when you didn't expect it!

"No, he's done it this time!" Peter said. He shifted the heavy weight of Neal's relaxed body against his shoulder; somehow raised him to the couch. "Get a docter, Di—telephone downstairs and ask them to send a doctor."

Diana stayed by Michael, whose soft little whimper she soothed with a hand on his round little cheek. She seemed unable to move. Her eyes did not shift from Peter and the limp figure that was growing less limp, growing to a hideous rigidity, on the couch.

Bruce had gone. Now Neal was gone. But Peter was there to comfort Di and love her.

THE END.

Shortage Is Reported In Trained Servants

It is as difficult to get a good cook or maid today as it was in the boom days. Waiting lines at domestic employment agencies have dwindled to almost nothing and there is an actual shortage of trained servants.

At a recent meeting of the New York Women's City Club, three reasons for this situation were discussed. These were Immigration restrictions, a tendency of Americans to regard domestic service as an unworthy endeavor, and lack of consideration by employers.

Numbers Slips And 8 Suspects Seized in Raids

Vice Squad Enters Two Alleged Gaming Places and Also Halts Auto.

Eight alleged numbers operators were arrested by Lieut. George Little's vice squad in raids yesterday.

Led by Detective Sergt. George Deyoe, police first invaded a lunchroom in the 400 block of C street.

They arrested Bradley A. Burkhart, alleged to be the proprietor, and Harry Abramovitz, of the 3500 black of Thirteenth street northwest. Both prisoners were charged with operating a lottery.

In the 1400 block of H street northeast, officers seized four men and confiscated, they said, a number of betting slips. Howard Talbert and Herbert Cook, both white, of the H street address, and William Herbert, of the 700 block of Thirteenth street northeast, and Leonard Johnson, of the 1600 block of Kramer street northeast, both colored, were taken into custody. All were charged with operating gaming tables.

Tax on Sales AgainPushed In Assembly

Threat of Filibuster Hurled by Senator John Callan.

Senate Group Talks of Passing New Levy as a Rider.

By Francis O. White, Jr.
A Staff Correspondent.

Annapolis, Md., March 29.—That effort will be made in the Senate to revive the 2 per cent general sales tax measure and rush it through to enactment to supersede the 1 per cent gross retail receipts measure, was the prevailing topic about legislative corridors tonight. It was learned that a group of Senators who have advocated this proposal from the outset were in conference throughout the afternoon, and that only one vote was needed.

What part, if any, Gov. Nice had in the conference could not be learned. The executive has been a sponsor of the sales tax and was disappointed when the Senate dropped it and elected to adopt the 1 per cent receipts bill as a substitute. He has announced that he will approve the latter measure, though "reluctantly." The signing is scheduled to take place tomorrow.

It was said by those in close touch with the newly proposed move, that the sales tax bill which was approved by the House several days ago, could be used as an amendment, and tacked on to some other measure, as a "rider," and then rushed through under suspension of rules. Belief was expressed that a sufficient number of recalcitrant Republican Senators, as well as Democrats could be whipped into line for approval of this course.

Revenue Doubted.

The sales tax is designed to raise $6,500,000 revenue within a year, $5,000,000 of which would go for relief, and the other $1,500,000 for the old-age pension fund, whereas grave doubt exists as to the income from the 1 per cent tax, estimates varying between $4,100,000 and $5,000,000. The bill has aroused a storm of protest among retail merchants throughout the State, who threatened to take the issue to court.

Meanwhile trouble confronts the Senate as result of bitter opposition to Senator Veasey's beer tax bill which reached the third reading file this afternoon. Senator John Callan, Baltimore City, threatened to engineer a filibuster tonight with the announcement that he would talk until Monday night. The Senate did not resume its session until 9:30 and launched into consideration of local measures on the third reading file before tackling any major proposals.

Training Bill Stirs House.

While the Senate was thus engrossed, the House was at grips over the military training measure. Originally given a favorable report by the judiciary committee, this bill was recommitted to the military committee and that group brought it out with an adverse report. Delegate Joseph Griesacker, Baltimore City, its author, sought to have the bill substituted for the report, but his motion was voted down 81 to 29, after protracted debate, in which Delegates Clarence W. Whealton, Wicomico County, chairman of the military committee; John S. White and Charles C. Marbury, Prince Georges County, were the chief participants. Whealton told the House his committee was of the opinion that a boy attending a State-aided institution should give at least part of his time to training for defense of the State.

Delegate White leveled a bitter attack on the measure, calling attention to the fact that it was opposed by the American Legion and its Women's Auxiliary, Daughters of the American Revolution, Veterans of Foreign Wars and other patriotic organizations. He charged that opponents had not been given sufficient opportunity to present their views at committee hearings. Asserting that the board of regents of the University of Maryland is nonpolitical and delegated to look after the education of the youth, he declared that if the bill were enacted it would in effect be telling them they are not competent to pass on the question. White also asserted that Secretary of War Dern is opposed to the proposal, and that optional military training prevails only in Wisconsin and Minnesota.

The bill to permit the Cumberland Fair Association to hold one horse race meeting annually, with betting privileges allowed, was among a number of measures finally to clear legislative channels. Introduced in the House by Delegate C. William Baer, Allegany County, it was approved by that body, and today the Senate, acceding to a motion to suspend rules by Senator Kimble, passed it. The bill now goes to the Governor for his signature.

Gov. Nice today signed the narcotics bill, a rewrite of the former State law, the chief feature of which places a ban against sale of the marihuana cigarettes. The act was drafted to conform with Federal law.

Approximately four months will be required to complete grading. Paving will be finished about next November.

There remains nearly a mile of the drive which is not covered by any contract. This includes an overhead bridge at the Lee highway crossing of the drive at Panorama. Grading at the Front Royal entrance of the drive is practically completed.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Lewis G. Stewart, Stafford County constable, was bruised and Douglas Gray, Stafford game warden, sustained a bad cut on the head when hit with his own rifle, which one of the men had wrested from him.

The officers were called to the farm of French Woodard, where the colored men were said to be acting suspiciously. The officers arrested them and were about to take them to the county jail when the attack took place.

Tentative Plans Made to Enlarge Maryland Institutions.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, March 29.—Dr. George H. Preston, director of the State board of mental hygiene, is preparing tentative plans for the enlargement of three State institutions.

The plans will be submitted, probably next week, to the board of public works. The State comptroller is to sell bonds in the value of $500,000 for the work on April 15.

"My plans are not in proper shape for announcement," Dr. Preston said. "I'll have to learn how the board of public works will allocate the funds before I can make definite arrangements."

He intimated that he would ask that approximately half the amount be allocated to new buildings at Spring Grove State Hospital, Catonsville, about $50,000 for the Crownsville Hospital and the balance for the Eastern Shore State Hospital at Cambridge.

Milk Control Ruled Valid In Virginia

State Supreme Court Reverses Self to Give Liberal Opinion.

4-3 Decision Upholds Police Power to Regulate Industry.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., March 29.—Exactly a year after passage of the act by the 1934 General Assembly, the State Supreme Court today reversed itself and declared the Virginia milk control law constitutional.

The liberal interpretation handed down today brings to an apparently favorable conclusion the series of vicissitudes that have marked the course of the measure, which in November was held invalid by the Supreme Court in a 4-2 decision.

On a petition for rehearing, the case was reopened in January and argued before the court early this month by Attorney General A. P. Staples who, as a member of the Senate when the bill was passed, sponsored its adoption.

Court Divided, 4-3.

The court was divided 4-3 on the decision rendered today. Justice Gregory wrote the opinion, in which Chief Justice Campbell and Justices Browning and Eggleston concurred. Justice Holt wrote the dissenting opinion, in which Justices Hudgins and Chinn joined.

Agency to Resume Task.

Others at the capitol agreed with the Governor that the control agency set up under the law would immediately resume its functions, which include licensing producers, fixing prices, levying assessments to meet the costs of enforcement, and otherwise regulating the industry, which represents approximately one-fourth of the value of Virginia's farm products.

The court's decision caught the three-man board by surprise. None of them was in Richmond when the news was released. The board has been dormant since the court's first ruling. Composing the milk commission are J. Stuart Agnew, of Burkeville, chairman; Kone Brugh, of Nace, and Dr. Tipton R. Snavely, of the University of Virginia.

In substance, the majority opinion reasoned that the State possesses police power to regulate industries affected with a public interest and that the terms of the milk control act constitute a reasonable exercise of this power.

"Our view of the Virginia act is that it does not contravene either the Federal or the Virginia Constitution," the majority opinion declared, "and this being true the Legislature had the power to provide for an injunction to restrain a violation of the act."

Producers Had Appealed.

The question of the constitutionality of the law was put to the Supreme Court in an appeal of producers in the Staunton area from a decree by a Richmond court granting an injunction to the milk commission to restrain the dairymen from violating the control law.

"A State Legislature deals with situations from a practical standpoint," Justice Gregory wrote. "It is better qualified than the court to determine the necessity, character, and degree of regulations of an industry, which new and perplexing conditions may require; and its conclusions should not be disturbed by the courts unless they are clearly arbitrary and unreasonable."

The legislative facts declared in the act are nowhere denied, the majority opinion asserted, "nor are the facts alleged in the bill denied."

Emergency Held to Exist.

Wording of the statute set forth that an economic emergency existed in the milk industry because of such severe competition that producers found it impossible to conduct their business on a sound basis, and contended that so many persons were involved that the industry was affected with a public interest.

The law provides that when the emergency ceases to exist, a proclamation by the Governor can suspend operation of the act.

Ex-Treasurer For Roanoke Goes to Jail

Frantz Enters Prison in Richmond to Begin 2-Year Term.

Is Accompanied by Son; Staples Identifies His Fellow Townsman.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., March 29.—Electing to come to the penitentiary in the company of his son, instead of in the custody of a prison guard as provided by law, J. H. Frantz, former Roanoke city treasurer, arrived at the State prison this afternoon to begin serving a 2-year sentence for shortages in accounts.

His admission to the penitentiary was similar to that of Terry Woods, the former Roanoke delinquen tax collector, convicted of embezzlement, who showed up at the penitentiary Wednesday unaccompanied.

Local identification of both men was required before they were allowed to change into prison garb. In both instancs Attorney General A. P. Staples, a Roanoker, furnished the identification.

Today Frantz arrived first at the attorney general's office, and Staples called Penitentiary Superintendent Rice M. Youell, who subsequently sent one of his staff to the attorney general's office, where the identification was made.

Maj. Youell, who thinks constantly of his morale problems, said he had much preferred that both men had come in the regular way, on the prison bus in the custody of "Long Chain Charlie," the bus guard, who has brought in prisoners for many years.

Frantz brought the necessary papers from the Roanoke court with him.

Legion Session Set to Promote Child Welfare

W. Glenn Elliott, Adjutant, Tells of April 8 Parley at Charlottesville.

By the Associated Press.

Charlottesville, Va., March 29.—An American Legion meeting devoted to child welfare will be held here April 8.

W. Glenn Elliott, State adjutant, announcing the meeting, said today it "will be one of the Virginia department's most important meetings of the year."

"The day will be devoted to a child welfare conference for the study of problems we are meeting," said Mr. Elliott. "The legion is greatly interested in child welfare and is spending large sums of money for both direct and indirect relief, due to the fact that hundreds of veterans are dying, leaving widows and orphans without funds or Government support, since frequenty the deceased veteran was not drawing compensation of any kind."

Homer L. Chaillaux, national director of the Americanism commission of the American Legion, will be the principal speaker. He will speak at an open meeting to be held at night.

The conference will begin at 10 a. m. The annual meeting of the Seventh Legion District will be coupled with the conference and is scheduled for 4 p. m., with Edward C. Delegates Reject 'Black Bass' Bill

Library Training Measure Also Defeated.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., March 29.—The "black bass" bill, designed to prevent the sale of the fish in the State, was defeated by the House of Delegates today when a favorable report of the fish and game committee was rejected by a vote of 67 to 37. The bill was laid on the table.

The measure also would have made it unlawful to catch any species of black bass, except by angling, during the open season including July, August, September and November.

The House also killed a bill providing that persons could not be eligible for appointment as county librarian unless they had received at least one year's training in a library school approved by the Maryland Public Library Advisory Commission.

Waynesboro Silk Factory May Be Shut

Stehli Plant's Closing 'Very Possible,' Says Vice President.

Firm, Employing 400 at Peak, Has Reduced Pay Roll to 25.

By the Associated Press.

Waynesboro, Va., March 29.—A decision to close the Waynesboro plant of the Stehli Silk Corporation has not yet been made, although it is "very possible," H. E. Stehli, vice president, said in a communication to D. T. Coiner, chamber of commerce president, today.

The local plant had employed about 400 workers steadily since its establishmen in 1925 until several months ago, when employes were dropped at a rapid rate. Today less than 25 remain on the pay roll.

Meanwhile many of those dropped have been absorbed by the expansion of the Du Pont rayon plant or have secured positions in silk mills at Orange and Charlottesville.

Reports were that the Stehli Corporation plans to close its plants at Mannheim, Pa., High Point, N. C., and Waynesboro, concentrating all work at its Harrisonburg (Va.) and Lancaster (Pa.) mills.

The Waynesboro plant was doubled in size in 1927 and is one of the most modern mills owned by the corporation, one of the country's leading silk manufacturers. The company owns a large tract adjacent to its plant here. The C. & O. and the N. & W. Railroads have joined with the local chamber of commerce in seeking to prevent the closing of the plant.

The Capital Approaches a Movie Week That Is Unique in Its Implied Antiquity

Film Plays Are Predominantly Relics of Past

Returns OutrunPremieres; National Dates Changed; Amusement Chatter.

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

By Nelson B. Bell.

It is difficult to recall just such a week in the precincts of the cinema as the one which begins today.

Usually there is a considerable scurrying about to be sure that new pictures will be on view for the edification of the faithful, come Friday. This week there seems to have been a considerable scurrying about to be sure that the faithful would be edified by sure-fire successes with which they already are familiar.

Thus we have, instead of an impressive parade of new features only two that actually are new and five that are known to the cash customers. The two new ones would be "Let's Live Tonight"—which, incidentally, is a fine idea—in which Tullio Carminati, the hero of Grace Moore's "One Night of Love," and Lillian Harvey are the co-stars, and George White's 1935 edition of his celebrated "Scandals," in which are engaged the talents of a prodigious number of players of the first grade.

"The Mystery of Edwin Drood" will be found reviewed on this page of today's Post. Of the others, "It Happened One Night," "Life Begins at 40," "Roberta" and "The Little Colonel" are known quantities. And how well, and how favorably, they are known! Hits every one.

Situation Is Still Unique.

But it still is a unique situation—a new theater week coming up and only known films with which to dally, barring, of course, the two big newcomers.

And the two newcomers are big. We seem to recall having exploded a few expletives in favor of George White's new "Scandals," both over the air and in type, and have no hesitancy whatever in adding this encomium to a production that so far outdistances Georgie's first for the screen—an ill-judged thing, if ever there was one—that they ought not to be mentioned in the same breath—although they probably will be. That will be at Loew's Fox.

At the Earle, "Let's Live Tonight" will not be far behind—if any. It seems to have everything essential to a front-runner, as we say over in Walter Haight's department.

And then there is the item of Mitzi Green, the hoyden of the gelatins until she, more or less recently, grew up. As a vaudeville headliner her emergence into maturity will be an interesting subject of professional observation.

Society's doors are swinging wide, as you might say, for the members of the cast of "Life Begins at 8:40," the sprightly revue currently packing them in at the National.

Today at luncheon, Luella Gear, Bert Lahr, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Bolger, Frances Williams, Panjandrum Stephen E. Cochran, of the National; Dixie Dunbar, Brian Dunlevy and John Shubert, son of the famous J. J., will be guests of Mrs. Evelyn Walsh McLean.

Tonight in the ballroom of the Shoreham, Manager L. Gardner Moore will be host to Mr. and Mrs. Bolger, who are guests of the Shoreham for the week. The honored guest of Mr. and Mrs. Bolger—and Ruth Barnard it is who points out that this all is getting complicated—with Dixie Dunbar, the cute little Georgia "Cracker," who, in the early days of her career, was a protege of Carter Barron, now local district manager for Loew's interests.

That young fellow, Barnee, by the way, has a few things up his sleeve to pull this evening when Mr. Bolger begins doing his stuff on the floor. That would be the Barnee of the Breeskin tribe, whose real name is Barnett and whose dad was the Daniel, noted back in the days of the silent fillums for the excellence of his orchestral synchronizations for the interpretation of the flickers to senses other than the visual.

Dates are Juggled.

Speaking of Panjandrum Stephen E. Cochran, as somebody was back there, he is the gentleman who explodes a bombshell in the ear of the drama department by shouting over one of the C. & P. Telephone Co.'s otherwise inactive wires that the opening of his eleventh consecutive annual season of the National Theater Players will be on Monday night, April 29, instead of the same day of the week falling on the 22d, as originally announced.

This brings up a matter that has, more or less, been kept secret heretofore. That is the business of the booking of Jane Cowl and John Halliday in "Rain From Heaven," into the National as the last of the season's subscription attractions of the American Theater Society of Washington.

This was an event originally set down for the week of May 6, which would have made it appear that the National Theater Players, opening a fortnight or so before, might not be doing so well. To avoid this false implication—and I trust that is what it will turn out to be—the good Panjandrum has gone about it to defer inauguration of his annual festival a week and move up the advent of Miss Cowl and Mr. Halliday by a couple, so that all may derive the maximum benefit from the National Capital's inclination to attend the play.

On Sunday, by gentleman's agreement, this department will disclose something of the plans of the National Theater Players for their eleventh season and the favorite personalities who will grace the company's 1935 roster. Until then you will have to wait.

It is important to remember, however, that "stock" does not come along until a week after it was expected and that "Rain From Heaven" comes a fortnight sooner, even if you had not expected it!

That's the way show business is.

That rollicking comedy of a cracked-brained family, "Three Cornered Moon," by Gertrude Tonkonogy, will be presented for the first time on any local stage by the dramatic society at the Jewish Community Center Sunday night.

The play, which enjoyed a huge New York success, and later captured the laughs of the entire country as a motion picture, is the first three-act play to be given this season by the society. The cast includes Louis Greenblatt, Philip Notes, Rose Skopp, Caroline Salzberger, J. Y. Brooks, Gordon Lightstone, Milton A. Halpern and Leah Salzberger.

First of New Series.

Mrs. William Mann heads the new series for children announced by the Women's International League, Washington sponsor of the Children's Theater of New York.

Mrs. Mann, wife of the director of the National Zoo, in a brief talk at Pierce Hall on Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock, will conduct her audience around the Zoo, introduce her favorite friends, tell something of their traits and of her own acquaintance with them.

She will autograph copies of her book "From Jungle to Zoo: Adventures of a Naturalist's Wife," a recent Junior Literary Guild choice, for any owners who wish to bring them. A few copies will be available at the hall.

In addition to Mrs. Mann's talk, there is to be a picture, "Taming of the Jungle," dedicated "to the wild-animal lovers of the world." It shows how animals are caught and trained for exhibition purposes. There will be supplementary features.

Saturday, April 13, the second in the series, will be Francis Shinn's Marionettes, also at Pierce Hall and at 3 o'clock.

With "Aladdin and His Wonderful Lamp" scheduled for production at the National on Saturday, April 20, and the last in the new series for the following Saturday, April 27, the problem of what to do with the youngsters should be solved at least through the Easter holidays. This last event is Spencer Howell, magician. His program will be supplemented by movie shorts.

A subject of interest to Italo-Americans will be the announcement that on Sunday at 3 a meeting will be held at the home of Edward J. Geraci, 4819 Iowa avenue, to make plans for the presentation of a group of plays by Pirandello. The invitation is open to all those who speak Italian and are endowed with dramatic ability—which lets us out on both counts.

It seems to me, and I may be a prejudiced bystander, that that ardent groundhog of ours has it all over spring as a source of succor to the human soul.

Or maybe that isn't what I have—what with Herb Williams around, and everything!

Favorites Back on Local Screens

The handsome young man above at the left, although to all appearances slightly perplexed about something, is Tullio Carminati, remembered as leading man with Grace Moore in "One Night of Love," who returns to the Earle screen today as chief luminary—along with Lilian Harvey—of "Let's Live Tonight." At right above you need not be told that it is Claudette Colbert who is looking out of the page at you. She comes back to the Metropolitan screen, likewise today, opposite Clark Gable in "It Happened One Night," the picture that won more medals than any other ever made—and more or less deservedly so.

"THE MYSTERY OF EDWIN DROOD." Universal picturization of the Charles Dickens novel, adapted to the screen by Leopold Atlas and Bradley King, featuring Claude Rains, Douglass Montgomery, David Manners and Heather Angel. Directed by Stuart Walker. Reviewed Thursday afternoon by W. A. Whitney.

Although there is no such thing as a perfect crime—at least, in storybook criminology—"The Mystery of Edwin Drood" has remained for nearly 65 years the outstanding exception to the rule. How and why Edwin Drood disappeared, no one has been able to fathom, so adroitly did Charles Dickens hide the usually tell-tale clews.

Many have been the attempts to complete this novel, stopped by the hand of Death, but none has successfully answered all the questions raised by the published details. Accordingly, when Universal Pictures announced its intention to film the mystery of mysteries, the presentation upon the screen was eagerly anticipated.

Yesterday "The Mystery of Edwin Drood" opened at the Belasco, the first domestic attraction for the house of "the international cinema," and it is with mixed feelings that we record our reaction.

Surely, this can not be "The Mystery of Edwin Drood" as the great Dickens wrote it: it is too palpably obvious—no measures at all being taken to shroud in wonder and suspense the victim, the murderer, the disposition of the body, or anything. Were this the real Dickens' story, it would be a sad, sad commentary on the ingenuity of savants for three score and more years.

Strange, however, as it may seem, it makes little difference here whether this be the original story or a figment of some scenarist's imagination—the picture is pleasing and entertaining, made so by a complement of excellent actors and a genuine re-creation of Ye Olde England in 1870.

Since his becoming visible in "Crime Without Passion," Claude Rains has given some remarkable delineations, none of which, however, seems to approach his work here as John Jasper, the friend of Edwin Drood, whom Universal's writers have decided was the guilty party. A convincing argument is built up, offering in the story development all manner of histrionic chances, out of which Mr. Rains makes the most. Somewhat reminiscent of his work in the aforementioned picture, the portrayal here is more restrained, making the madness more subtle and more completely believable.

David Manners, in the role of the victim; Douglass Montgomery, as the unjustly accused, and Heather Angel, beloved by both, but finally won by the latter, turn in excellent performances which suffer only in comparison with the Rains portrayal.

Special mention should be made of the admirable manner in which the picture reflects the period. Everything is so completely natural that it seem sperfectly fitting to look upon the costumes and furnishing of the time and feel no sense of anachronism.

The supporting attractions are one of the Musical Mood Technicolor series, "Mexican Idyl," wherein "Cielito Linde" and "La Golondrina" are the featured musical selections; the Terry-Toon, "Irish Sweepstakes," and a release of the Pathe News.

The late and unlamented World War, in the more than 16 years since the Armistice, has been the source of many dramaturgic ventures presenting commentaries on the effects of that conflict on a wide variety of people and circumstances. However, the sad plight of the 100 per cent, though hyphenated, American has been somewhat neglected.

Wednesday and last evenings at Pierce Hall that deficiency was eradicated by the Pierce Hall Players' presentation of "Field of Honor," by Betty Souby, who attempted to show the effect upon a naturalized German-America of the mad hysteria of a quasi-patriotism during the hectic period of America's paricipation in the war.

Not only did the author succeed admirably in the presentation of her thesis, but the Players also found in this work quite the best of the six manuscript plays they have essayed. "Field of Honor" is a somber, thoughtful and provocative drama which, although getting lost at times in a welter of characters and leaning on occasion too strongly toward melodrama, offers a drama worthy of serious consideration.

Story Is Not Unknown.

The story of the vicissitudes of the German-American is not unknown—how his nationality and his accent presupposed him to be a violent and dangerous individual. And so it was with good, kind Peter Breyfogle, notwithstanding the fact that he gave his son as a sacrifice to the allied cause and his own eyesight to the frustration of an alien spy plot.

There are, however, slight narrative threads in the fabric of "Field of Honor." It is more a study of the lovable Peter Breyfogle and his reactions to his situation. In that part Frank Jamison delivered a characterization that tops anything he has ever done—and Mr. Jamison is one of the players most noted for masterful handling of difficult character parts.

While Mr. Jamison's portrayal dominates the entire play, others of the company were responsible for excellent interpretations. Elinor Cox Karsten, as the housekeeper; Helen Shields, as the granddaughter; Clarence W. Moore, as her soldier-husband; William Austin Davis, as the watchmaker's son, and George Farrington, as the Secret Service agent, are to be numbered among those turning the better—and longer—interpretations. The others are to be complimented for fine supporting work.

Virginia's Tax On Cash Gifts Brings $50,000

Measure Enacted Last June Bolsters Revenue of Income Levy.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., March 29.—People with money to give away have contributed approximately $50,000 to the general treasury of Virginia since June 19, 1934, Tax Commissioner C. H. Morrissett revealed today.

This amount is the income to date from the gift tax, enacted in 1934 and effective just before the beginning of the present fiscal year. Virginia is the third State to adopt such a tax, the best available information at the tax department indicates. The Federal Government also has a similar levy.

The gift tax law was enacted to bolster up the Sate income tax act, Mr. Morrissett pointed out, and the revenue was not expected to be great.

Every donor of a gift exceeding $1,000 to any one person is required to report the donation to the tax department. The exemptions, however, are the same as under the State inheritance tax law and the rates of taxation are the same.

Where the donee bears a lineal ancestor, lineal descendant or consort of the donor, the exemption is $5,000 as to each donee; where the relationship is that of brother, sister, nephew or niece, the exemption as to each is $2,000; in other cases the exemption is $1,000.

Reports on all gifts between June 19 and January 1, 1934, should have been filed before March 15, but it was stated at the tax department that some reports have not yet been received. Donors failing to file returns on time are assessable with a penalty of 10 per cent of the taxes due, tax department officials asserted.

Jack Haley, now on the coast, is entitled to a legitimate squawk, it seems to me . . . Haley originally was offered the leading part in "Three Men on a Horse," biggest comedy hit of recent season . . . Haley read the script and offered to take it—but only on condition that George Abbott be called in to polish off script crudities . . . The author, John Cecil Holm, refused this, insisting on Joseph Spurin-Calleia as director . . . Haley then offered to pay personally for Abbott's services, but this too was rejected and Haley went to the coast . . . A few weeks later, George Abbott WAS called in to doctor the script, but Haley already was making a picture and so missed the biggest comedy smash-hit of the year . . . Ideal combination in the play would have been Jack Haley and Helen Lynd.

A very natural mistake on Jack Dempsey's part almost cost the morning papers first crack at the pictures of the Dempsey baby . . . Talking with him weeks back, I asked him if he'd give me the scoop on the picture and he explained that he couldn't do that, because it would offend a lot of his pals in the newspaper business . . . So we compromised: Dempsey agreed to release the baby's picture to all morning papers and press services simultaneously . . . Wednesday evening, at 6 o'clock, I learned that somebody had switched the plans . . . The pictures were to be released at 9 a. m. Thursday . . . I knew that Dempsey hadn't "crossed" me, and the phone confirmed this . . . "The morning papers go to press the night before, Jack," I told him . . . "By releasing the photos at 9 a. m., you are killing the morning papers and giving the scoop to the afternoon papers" . . . a few minutes later the City News tickers were tapping out this message in every New York paper: "Dempsey baby pictures will be released immediately to all morning papers. Pick them up at Ira Hill, 677 Fifth avenue."

Authority to issue bonds for these improvements would be vested in the county commissioners if funds are made available by the PWA to meet part of the costs.

Louis Batters Natie Brown to Take Easy Ten-Round Decision

This Morning...

With Shirley Povich

Gus H. Fan, Biloxi, Miss., March 29.
Gen'l Delivery,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Gus:

This fellow Bucky Harris has his own ideas about running a ball team. I was asking him today, Gus, how come he's gonna hide in the dugout this season and manage the club from the bench instead of being out there on the coaching lines giving the team what we guys call inspiring leadership, and he had his answer ready.

HARRIS.

He said it was the bunk, this business of a manager being out there on the coaching lines, Gus. It wasn't because he was a-scared of the fans' boos when things went wrong, but he believes a manager's place is on the bench. He's tried it both ways, Gus, and that's his decision. Being out there on the coaching lines don't do the club no good, he says. A manager ain't gonna inspire a lot of professional athletes that way.

Back there on the bench, he says, he's in a position to talk it up better, Gus, and let the boys know first hand what he's aiming at. There's times, he says, when the manager tips off the opposition simply by running in from the coaching lines to the batter's box to give the hitter some instructions that couldn't be relayed by signs. It would be a dead giveaway and it wouldn't be necessary if the manager was on the bench with his ball players.

The fact is, Gus, according to Bucky, that he was virtually a bench manager with Washington back in 1924 and 1925 when he was winning pennants, despite the fact that everybody thought he was a playing manager. Here's the way he figured it out for me.

According to Bucky, Gus, 90 per cent of a ball team's strategy takes place when the team is at bat. That is the time when the manager is usually pulling strings, and when he was the playing manager of the Nats, he wasn't on the coach lines at all. He was back there on the bench with his ball players figuring things out, and you have to admit he did pretty well at it.

There isn't much to be done by a manager, Gus, when the other side is at bat. Out there in the field, a manager can't tell the pitchers how or what to pitch. They probably know more about it than he does, Bucky says. The manager's chief functions when the club is on the defense is to order the infield in or out, as the case may be.

The late Jawn McGraw was the only modern-day manager who pretended to know more about pitching than his pitchers, Gus.

Bucky was saying today, too, Gus, that he was lucky to have Red Kress around fighting for that shortstop job. He's figuring on Kress relaying those throws in from the outfield like Joe Cronin used to do, and you remember Cronin had the best relaying arm in the league. Well, according to Bucky, Buddy Myer can't do the relaying job because his arm isn't built for distance throwing, and Lyn Lary is no great shucks at it either, so Bucky figures that is one item that gives Kress the edge.

In case you have forgotten, Gus, Bucky was some pumpkins as a relay thrower himself back in 1924 and 1925. He used to handle those throws from the outfield those days, because Peckinpaugh's arm wasn't much for distance.

And another thing you're gonna see this season, Gus, is some new infield strategy that Bucky has invented all by himself. He tried it out with the Red Sox last year and it worked. The wonder is that no manager ever thought of it before, Gus.

It's like this: When the tying or winning run is on third base, Bucky isn't gonna order his whole infield to play in on the grass like they usually do. If a right-handed hitter is up, you're gonna see only the Washington first baseman and second baseman playing in. The shortstop and third baseman will be at their regular positions behind the base lines.

The way Bucky has figured it, Gus, the hitter's chances of driving one through the infield with the players in on the grass is reduced by his tactics. If he pulls the ball to right, it is sure to be hard hit and the third baseman or shortstop should have time to make the play at home, even if they are playing back. If the ball is knocked to the first baseman or second baseman, it doesn't figure to be so hard hit, but they will be playing in and will have a shorter throw home. Bucky's trying to eliminate those hits through the infield that the batters are always aiming at when the infield is playing close in.

Of course, Gus, if it's a left-handed batter up at the plate, why the positions of the infield will be reversed. I'm sure you understand. If not, why, just forget it.

Anyway, Gus, I'll be seein' ya when the frost gets off the pumpkin.

Pep Talks Bunk, Says Gallico; Gives One to Golden Glovers

By Paul Gallico

A Special Correspondent.

CHICAGO, March 29.—This writer will have to be somewhat excused today because he is just getting over the effects of contemplating himself after giving his team of Golden Gloves intercity boxers their pep talk. Once each year I find myself in the dubious and uncomfortable position of urging a lot of young men to go out and do something that I wouldn't do, which is to place myself in the position where some one could punch me on the nose and in the middle with right hands.

This is always most injurious to my self-esteem and for days I have to go around avoiding mirrors for fear I might look into one and see a fight manager. It is also dangerous for me to be alone. At such times, I am liable to entertain the idea of going out and fighting a policeman or a total stranger in a bar just so I can look my boxers in the eye again, and I know that this would not be good for me, because I can not fight a lick.

I have never held a very high opinion of the pep talk, though older heads than mine tell me that it is a custom highly favored among the Banderlog or race of two-legged apes. The ancients always made long speeches before going into battle. Somehow among us gregarious monkeys, it seems to make us feel better about something unpleasant that is about to happen if we have a little conversation about it first.

One of my chief complaints against pep talks is that they are all too serious and often a great bore. My favorite pep-talker was a Roman general by the name of Germanicus, who got up before the legions preceding an important engagement, and told them funny and slightly dirty stories. Thus, many of the legionnaires were found dead with smiles on their faces. Any way, they were the best soldiers the world has ever known.

I have listened to college crew pep talks, football pep talks, before the game and between the halves, and found them all sheared out of the same pattern and uninspiring. As a matter of fact, the most illuminating one I ever heard was one year when old Jim Rice, the Columbia crew coach, in looking over his squad an hour before the race, noted that he had mostly seniors in his boat, men who had been listening to his pep talks for three years and knew them by heart, merely said—"All right, fellers; go on out there and don't get tired. Get out in front and stay there."

This seemed to cover the situation. Once I have entered a competition and made the necessary sacrifices to train and get into condition. I do not need anyone to urge me to fight, or to do my best, or not to give up.

DETROIT, March 29.—Joe Louis, the Detroit Destroyer, wrote finis to the title aspirations of Natie Brown by soundly trouncing the Washington heavyweight in a thrilling, if one-sided, fistic encounter witnessed by 13,136 at the Olympia here tonight.

Louis took every round decisively, relentlessly, by shuffling determinedly in on the walloper from Washington, spitting dynamite punches from both fists. At no time was the Brown Bomber from Detroit in any danger, but he dropped Brown through the ropes for a nine count in tht first round and had Natie on the way out numerous times during the encounter.

Brown flashed briefly in the fifth and sixth rounds which still went to Louis by goodly margins, but for the most part he was helpless in the face of the lethal left and deadly right that dangle from Louis' statuesque shoulders. Louis not only outpunched the elusive Natie, but he outboxed him for the most part, rendering Brown's customary ripping-into-the-body attauck null and void by some deft covering of the midsection and continually beating his opponent to the punch.

Open Flag Race In American Forecast

Any One of Six Clubs May Win; Tigers, Yankees Rated Strongest.

By Edward J. Neil,

Associated Press Sports Writer.

THAT perfect baseball prospect beloved of magnates—five or six clubs primed for a season's brawling all with a chance to win the pennant—finally has settled over the American League after entertaining the folks across the way in National League territory year after year.

It's been a long time since the junior circuit loosed a campaign as open as this one looks, with Detroit's defending champions rated little better, if any, than the New York Yankees and Cleveland Indians; the Boston Red Sox, the Philadelphia Athletics, and even the Washington Nationals potential apple cart wreckers, and the St. Louis Browns and the Chicago White Sox far from popovers.

Had to Happen.

Perhaps that's the way the baseball fates have of evening things, for with the league's greatest drawing card for the last 15 years, Babe Ruth, ready to lure hordes of people with him over to the National League, something had to happen to keep the turnstiles from rusting away. And, strangely enough, when the National League finally got Ruth it also got what looks to be the first two-team race there in years.

Mickey Cochrane's feeling that these are the same clubs that his Tigers whipped handily last year before getting into all that trouble with the Cardinals, and therefore should be no tougher to beat again, scarcely applies to the Yankees,

Grand National Goes To 22-1 Reynoldstown

By the Associated Press.

AINTREE, Eng., March 29.—Another determined American sortie against Aintree's rugged barriers collapsed today when Maj. Noel Furlong's Reynoldstown, a black 8-year-old gelding little considered in the wagering, ran John Hay Whitney's Thomond II into the ground in the final drive to win the gruelling Grand National steeplechase.

With the untold thousands who had backed him down to 9 to 2 cheering him on, Thomond II cleared the last barrier 300 yards from home slightly in front of Reynoldstown, with Lady Lindsay's Blue Prince, another outsider, only a few strides behind.

A moment later, however, it was obvious that the Whitney jumper had nothing left as first Reynoldstown, quoted at 22 to 1, pulled away and then Blue Prince flashed past, leaving the chief American hope floundering eight lengths behind. Three lengths separated the winner and Blue Prince at the finish.

It was a spectacular finish to a thrilling race, which saw 14 of the 27 starters, including Dorothy Paget's Golden Miller, the hottest favorite in the race's history, come to grief on the first circuit, and only six finish the trying 4½ miles over flat and 30 of the most difficult jumps known to the sport. Reynoldstown was clocked in the fast time of 9:21, only one second slower than the record established by Golden Miller last year.

Fouquet Refuses Jump.

When the three leaders crossed the finish line, the next horse was not in sight. Finally, Sir Geoffrey Congreve's Lazy Boots, held at 66 to 1, came galloping in to take fourth, and was followed by H. B. Brandt's Uncle Batt and Miss M. Lark's Bachelor Prince, also outsiders.

George H. (Pete) Bostwick, riding in his second Grand National, looked as if he might realize his long-cherished ambition when he kept his Castle Irwell up with the leaders during the first lap and hit the half-way mark only a half length back of the pace-setting Uncle Batt. Later, however, he came a cropper at the canal turn when running in fourth place.

Of the three other American entries, Whitney's Royal Ransom was the only one that completed the first turn. He was fourth at the midway point, but blundered shortly after-

Runyan Cards Record 276 On Links

P. G. A. Champ Wins by 8 Strokes at Pinehurst; Houghton Has 307.

By the Associated Press.

PINEHURST, N. C., March 29.—Paul Runyan today captured the thirty-third North and South Open Golf championship with a 72-hole score of 276, the lowest in the history of the fixture.

The P. G. A. champion had seven strokes to spare over Felix Serafin, Scranton, Pa., who finished second with 284 and was nine blows ahead of Henry Picard, Hershey, Pa., the defending titleholder, who took third place with 285. First place was worth $1,000 to the White Plains (N. Y.) pro; second money of the $4,000 tournament was $700 and third $500.

Ray Mangrum, lanky Los Angeles golfer, was fourth with 286 and Harry Cooper, Chicago, fifth with 287.

Runyan "broke fast" and finished "going away" in winning the tournament with a score a stroke below the previous record of 277 set by Joe Kirkwood in 1933.

Birdied First Hole.

He birdied the first hole and finished his first round with a 65 and three strokes lead over Serafin and Mangrum, who had 68s. At 36 holes after a second round 71 he held the same lead over Byron Nelson, of Texarkana, Tex.

A third round 72 left him with five strokes advantage and he closed with a 68.

Dragging a gallery of several thousand on his last round, Runyan treated it to a great exhibition. He was out in 33, 3 under par, and after 16 holes was 5 under, needing only par for a 66. He went one over on each of the last two holes, however, to muff his chances of breaking Kirkwood's record score by an even greater margin. His card:

Washington Drops Sixth Out of 10

Barons Score 3 Runs in First, 2 More in Second to Win.

By Shirley L. Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., March 29.—The Nats continued the evil tenor of their way today and collected another defeat from minor league opposition. The Birmingham Barons smote them down by the convincing figures of 6 to 4. At this writing, the Washington Club has succeeded in losing 6 of its 10 exhibition battles.

The Nats' batting attack was resuscitated to the extent of nine hits off three Birmingham pitchers, but the defeat can be traced directly to the door of Monte Weaver, who in the first two innings was about as effective as Hauptmann's alibi.

Weaver, whose shaky starts on the mound are legendary, required two innings to settle down and the Barons required only those two innings to win the ball game. They shook Weaver loose from three runs in the first inning and came back for two more in the second, which were sufficient.

Coppola Hurls Well.

The lone redeeming feature of the Nats' defeat was the performance of young Henry Coppola, the stocky Italian kid who is daily solidifying his place on the Washington pitching staff. Today, again, Coppola bore the earmarks of a big league pitcher. After succeeding Weaver in the sixth inning, Coppola yielded only one hit to the Barons. His fast ball that he kept annoyingly low, was superb.

The Nats outhit the Barons, 8 to 6, but they were scattering their shots where they would do the least good, after the first inning in which they took a 3-run lead, only to see it vanish as soon as the Barons met up with Weaver.

Washington encountered Carlos Moore, a former teammate who is

Eastern Gains Final; Wins By 26-23

Eliminates St. Francis of Brooklyn With Late Rally.

Trails at Half, 17 to 16, After Foe Runs Up 8-to-0 Margin.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

GLENS FALLS, N. Y., March 29.—An inspired rally in the last quarter carried a fighting Eastern High School basket ball team from Washington, D. C., to a 26-23 victory over St. Francis High, of Brooklyn, here tonight and sent the quintet from the Nation's Capital into the final round of the sixteenth annual Eastern States Interscholastic Tournament.

The Washington team was trailing on the short end of a 21-to-20 score at the close of the third quarter, but Buddy Shaner and Chick Hollidge opened up with some desperate shooting in the homestretch to shove the blue-clad outfit to a 26-to-23 lead with three minutes to play. A ball-freezing game allowed Eastern to stave off the Catholic League champions of New York City until the final gun.

Takes 12-to-9 Lead.

Four baskets by Capt. Lavelle Dean, of Eastern, kept his team in the running in the first half. St. Francis ran up a lead of 8-0 before Eastern began to hit its stride. At the end of the first period the Washington team was leading, 12-9. St. Francis came back in the second quarter, however, and by the end of the half was leading, 17 to 16.

The New York champs maintained their advantage in the third chapter, with Lahey and Lanning scoring a basket apiece while Chick Hollidge, of Eastern, countered with 4 points to keep Washington within striking distance of its rivals.

Washington-Lee Nine Downs Richmond, 4-3

Richmond, Va., March 29 (AP).—In a game liberal with errors and stingy with base hits, Washington and Lee's Generals trimmed Richmond University's baseball nine today, 4-3, in the first local college game of 1935.

The Generals got six hits off Hash and made as many errors. Richmond got eight bingles off Pette's delivery, and erred thrice. Pullen, W. and L., and Gilfillian, Richmond, led in hitting with two safeties each.

A man is as important as he feels and few men can feel important in an ill-fitting or poorly constructed suit . . . It is not a matter of paying a high price for your clothes but in securing clothes high in every respect except price . . . and that's where Stein-Bloch Clothes come into the picture.

For over 81 years their entire efforts have been devoted to the making of fine clothes and we doubt, very much, if any other concern knows more about or is better equipped to produce clothes of this character than they.

Tearout, Under Wright's Riding, Wins Tropical Feature at $21

Sun Fairplay Is Second in Mile Race

St. Moritz Is Third in Field of Six; Horse Throws Hanford.

By the Associated Press.

TROPICAL PARK, Fla., March 29.—D. M. Midkiff's Tearout, a $21.60-for-$2 hazard, evidently found the presence of Wayne Wright on his back just what the doctor ordered here today. The son of Terry displayed unexpected improvement and led home five other 3-year-olds in the one-mile Okeelanta purse. Mrs. W. S. Kilmer's Sun Fairplay trailed the winner by a length and a half, with A. J. "Whitey" Abel riding his own gelding, St. Moritz, to the show, a nose behind.

Of the six starters, the winner and Abner are the only ones not eligible for the $5,000 added mile-and-a-sixteenth Derby Consolation Stakes to be decided here on Monday, closing day of the meeting. Tearout, in giving Wright his twenty-fifth winner of the session, ran the eight furlongs in 1:39.

Tearout trailed the field around the first bend, Wild Pigeon, placed outside the stalls, rushed to the front in the run for positions. The son of Whichone hoisted the quitter's flag at the far turn as St. Moritz assumed command. Sun Fairplay also was bunched with the leaders. Wright shot Tearout up fast leaving the backstretch, but he was on the extreme outside when St. Moritz carried the leaders out at the turn into the home lane. The long shot was good enough to drive to the front and open up daylight in the last sixteenth. Sun Fairplay barely outlasted St. Moritz.

Wright Loses in Opener.

Wright was, as usual, on the favorite in the first event of six furlongs here this afternoon. The popular pilot was unable to win astride the odds-on choice, Chief A., which had to be content with third money despite a strong stretch bid. Wee Wink, Carl Hanford up, led from end to end, always holding Knights Hope a length or more at bay and finally scoring by a length and a half to pay just under 4 to 1. Knights Hope beat Chief A. by the same length. The time was 1:12 flat.

The daily double on Wee Wink and Piping Hot paid $113.0 for $2.

Wright, for the third straight day, scored a double in the saddle when Glistening, $10.30, won the last race by a half length. The filly came back very lame after the race. Winged Flight saved the place from Broken Up.

Bevan and Spangler Battle Here Monday

The completion of his scheduled 32-round all-welterweight boxing card featuring local talent at the Washington Auditorium Monday night was announced yesterday by Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn.

Ahearn yesterday signed Petey Bevan, Army Medical Center battler, to oppose Joe Spangler, of Richmond, in six-round support of Sid Silas and Phil Furr.

In supporting features, Roddy Davis squares off with Stumpy Jacobs and Red Journee engages Bob Lowry.

Aces Change Name.

Although traveling under another name, the Maryland Aces, now the Lucketts Bar nine, will open its ninth straight year shortly. The Aces won 18 out of 20 games played last year and 25 out of 28 in 1933. Frank Busbey Dowling has been signed as playing coach while Clinton Stewart will begin his eighth year as manager. Others who have played the last seven years are H. and B. Forney, Chaney, Connor, Lagana, Scalise, Vendemis, Narin Newman, W. Forney, L. Forasi, W. Fowler and T. Lagana. The Lucketts' Bar of Capitol Heights, Md., is backing the aces. Teams seeking games call John Newman, Capitol Heights, Md., between 8 a. m. and 6 p. m.

EWA Wins Opener.

The Emeregency Works Administration baseball team, a member of the United States Government League, opened its season yesterday afternoon with 7-0 victory over the Yellow Diamond Cab Co, nine on the North Ellipse. The shut-out pitching of Mickey McDonald, former Rinaldi Tailor hurler, was easily the feature.

PIPING HOT worked her way up and finished fast and won going away. TUDOR QUEEN came into her own, but weakened badly when caught. FAN ran well up all the way. DOVE OF PEACE had plenty of speed for a half-mile. SEMINOLE QUEEN was miserably ridden. She ran a disgraceful race.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FREDRICK, $6.40, $5.30, $3.10; LITTLE ARGO, $13.60, $4.70; IDLE VICTORY, $4.50.

FREDRICK running in his best form, followed early pace to the middle of the turn, where he ran into lead, opened wide gap, but tired suddenly and had to be ridden hard. LITTLE ARGO came around field and finished fast. IDLE VICTORY came through on inside and ran good race. COL. GREENE was poorly, had no chance. JESSIE D. M. had plenty of speed. POSTSCRIPT unseated her rider at start.

FIFTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $1,000. The Okeelanta. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:43. Off at 4:48. Winner, D. B. Midkiff's br. c. (3), by Terry—Rail On. Trained by H. Wells. Value to winner, $725; second, $175; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 1:39.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TEAROUT, $21.60, $6.10, $2.80; SUN FAIRPLAY, $3.90, $2.60; ST. MORITZ, $2.50.

TEAROUT, showing marked improvement over his recent efforts, trailed far back for first half-mile, began to move up turning out of back stretch, went up on inside in turn, then came to the outside and, finishing with a rush, won going away. SUN FAIRPLAY broke fast, but was eased back when WILD PIGEON took lead. He was sent up on the outside, carried wide by ST. MORITZ on stretch turn, and held on gamely. ST. MORITZ moved up on inside, carried field out on stretch turn, but weakened in final sixteenth. WILD PIGEON had plenty of speed for three-quarters of a mile and then tired. ABNER was well up for half a mile.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $700. Claiming price, $1,500. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won handily; place, easily. Went to post at 5:19½. Off at 5:20. Winner, L. A. IDLE ALONG got away well, was sent to the front going into first turn, was rated along, stalled off all bids and won handily. THUNDERTONE was taken up on outside in run down back stretch, closed gamely under the whip, but never really threatened the winner. BOOMS PAL came from a long way back to finish a fast-going third. SUN TEATIME had early speed.

At the Post . . .

Dear Al: Tropical Park, March 29.

Well, friend, I'm going to say good-by to this sunny joint tomorrow night and leave Trainer Joe to hold the fort on Monday's charity day program. I want to get to Bowie in time to get a line on the entries for the grand opening on Tuesday. Then, again, no news from Clocker Mike might be bad news. You know, I shipped him up to Bowie early in the week and I haven't heard from him. I wish to acknowledge the letter from "Paul C." No, I'm not the owner of Yellow Metal, and it certainly would be a tough job to dispose of the horse in the manner he suggests. As to what kind of a race I think is best for Yellow Metal, I would say about 3 miles under the jumps might suit his purposes. Do I think he will ever win again? My answer is that he might, providing C. W. Smith doesn't do the riding. In conclusion, I might say that possibly Yellow Metal is sore because the country went off the gold standard.

BILL.

First race—Golden Vein was scratched today and I believe the reason was that Jockey Wright was not available. Wright is scheduled to pilot this one tomorrow and I expect no mistakes. Happy Scot's last stamps him as a threat. Screen to take care of the others.

Second race—Willow Wood might find a way to lose this race, but I doubt if it can be made to look on the level. This is a pretty fair juvenile and that 115-pound assignment should not make a difference. Peloria and Dark Thatch for the other awards.

Third race—Befitting ran a pretty good race last out and one that points to improvement. I am going to string along with this fellow and Jockey Dupre in an effort to get a price. Mira, one of Wright's mounts, has to be considered. Flight of Gold has failed many times.

Fourth race—Major General has been primed for a winning race, either here or at Bowie. Recent trials have been excellent and I'm going to gamble that tomorrow's the day. The cold figures point to Jirasol II and Volta Maid. Abner raced today and would have to be respected if sent back.

Fifth race—Sabula, providing this one is going to win again, should get home first in this test. Don Guzman, despite that 120 pounds, is the one to beat, but Jockey Villena is a handicap. Speedmore could win it all, but he should be banished to Siberia if he scores after that disgraceful showing the other day.

Sixth race—Cathop has been rounding into form and this route may suit his purposes. Golden Rock II is a threat. Luxuro is in the right company and is a possible surprise. The same goes for Speedmore if he competes here.

Seventh race—I believe I gave Peedeque to the Seminole Indians some time ago, but I'm borrowing him for tomorrow. If he doesn't win this they should gilt him and use him in those statue scenes at the circus. Scotch Soldier and Relativity.

Eighth race—Masked Queen, Walkalong and Sand Runner is the way I prefer them in the day's finale.

Two Champions to Be Crowned Tonight in A. A. U. Court Play

Sholl's Faces Sleuths in Feature

Heurich Flashes Meet Black Hawks; Girls to Replay Game.

Tonight's Games.
7 p. m.—Semifinals. Al's A. C. vs. Sherwood.
8 p. m.—145-pound finals. Heurich Flashes vs. Twin Oaks Black Hawks.
9 p. m.—Unlimited finals. Sholl's vs. Bureau of Investigation.

THE long, long trail that started winding in The Post's District A. A. U. basket ball tournament on March 4 will come to an end tonight at Tech High School's gym, where champions in the unlimited and 145-pound divisions will be crowned.

Play will commence at 7 o'clock with Al's A. C., girls' champions for the last three years, and Sherwood, who oddly enough, wound up in a tie the other night, meeting again to determine which team will engage Leland's for the title next week.

Clashing in the unlimited feature at 9 o'clock will be the perennial arch rivals, Sholl's, 1932-33 champions, and Bureau of Investigation.

At 8 o'clock Heurich Flashes, defending champions, and Twin Oaks Black Hawks, will meet to decide the 145-pound title.

Allen to Make Awards.

District Commissioner George E. Allen, who took the main role in the dedicatory ceremonies a few weeks ago, will be on hand to reward the winners and runners-up. Commissioner Allen, a former college athlete, will award silver placques, gifts of The Washington Post, to the winning teams, and gold medals, also gifts of The Post, to members of each team. Silver medals, donated by the A. A. U., will be presented members of the runners-up teams.

Champions in three classes already having been crowned. The Boys' Club Americans are the 100-pound title holders; the Boys' Club Fleet Wings the 115-pound champions, and the Young Men's Community Club the 130-pound winners.

Hopes Stirred By Report of Biff Jones

By the Associated Press.

NORMAN, Okla., March 29.—High hopes of a conquering football team gripped the University of Oklahoma today, with the transfer of Capt. Lawrence (Biff) Jones here from Louisiana State University a possibility.

Enthusiastic discussions of grid prospects under the former West Point mentor were interlaced with sympathetic comments for the men he would replace — Head Coach Lewie Hardage and Bo Rowland, assistant.

Although Representative Johnson (Democrat), of Oklahoma declared in Washington that Jones' transfer had been "virtually assured," Adjt. Gen. James F. McKinley said the Army had made no final decision.

Gen. McKinley said the War Department was "considering" the transfer, but was communicating with the schools involved and with Jones concerning their wishes.

Jones could not be reached for immediate comment at Baton Rouge, scene of his quarrel with Senator Huey P. Long which resulted in his resignation as coach at Louisiana State University.

President James M. Smith, of the Louisiana school, refused to comment, as did Dr. W. B. Bizzell, University of Oklahoma president.

Jones would come here as military instructor, for a one-year assignment. His salary, it was reported, would be $7,500 a year.

Representative Johnson declared he had "private information that Jones wants the Oklahoma job."

Hardage has coached here three years, succeeding Ad Lindsay, now at Kansas University.

During Hardage's three years at the helm, Oklahoma grid squads won 11 games, lost 12, and tied 4. The record was identical for 1933 and 1932—4 won, 4 lost, and 1 tied. Last season the Sooners won 3, lost 4, and tied 2 games.

The Warrenton girls have won 13 out of 18 this season; the Warrenton boys, 4 out of 18.

Long's L. S. U. Coach Worried Over Track

By Alan Gould
Associated Press Sports Editor.

BATON ROUGE, La., March 29.—Maybe things are different when the Kingfish comes home and, if so inclined, cracks the whip over the coaching staff of his favorite university.

Maybe they are simply enjoying the lull before another football storm, but so far as this observer can detect, all is quiet and under control this spring on the campus of Louisiana State.

It's true that Bernie Moore is worried. Bernie is the otherwise calm, god-natured individual who was unexpectedly elected to replace Capt. Lawrence McC. (Biff) Jones as head football coach after the former West Pointer broke off diplomatic relations with Senator Huey Long in a dressing-room quarrel last December.

But it isn't the football outlook or Senator Long's prospective pep talks that is worrying Bernie Moore. He has finished spring football practice with a big, likely looking squad. The condition of Abe Mickal's injured knee has been a source of some concern, but an operation on the back-field star, who declined a senatorial toga last fall as a gridiron reward from Huey, is expected to be effective. It's the track team that has Bernie discouraged.

"We had good prospects for another championship team thsi year," said Moore, "until we lost our best hurdler, Thomas, and a broad jumper, Whipple, who could be counted on to do close to 25 feet consistently. We will have Slats Hardin, but big Jack Torrance is through with varsity competition, although he is still heaving the shot around here, continuing his studies and keeping in trim for the 1936 Olympics. I'm afraid we will just have a fair to middlin' track team, unless some of the boys come through with unexpected performances."

There is, in short, plenty of athletic material here, no matter what uniform it is wearing. They are, for the most part, just a lot of Lousiana boys making good under surroundings that involve consistent encouragement, good coaching and extraordinary facilities.

The athletic plant at L. S. U. has been literally mushroomed. The football team and the band are Senator Long's hobbies whenever the Kingfish wants to get relaxation from politics. There's no joy in Baton Rouge, however, unless the neighboring rival, Tulane, is among the gridiron victims of the Tigers. There is little doubt that Tulane's last-minute victory last season contributed to the ultimate break between Long and Jones.

Louis Pounds Brown Into Defeat

hard right. Joe rammed home a glancing left to the body, then knocked Brown's guard down with a vicious right. Louis missed a left to the body and a right to the head, then pinned Brown to the ropes and ripped both hands to the midsection. Brown snapped over an overhand right in a clinch, then brought his right into Louis' belly. Louis raised Nate half off the floor wth a right uppercut and made Nate clinch desperately as blood poured from a wide-open left eye. Brown was covering cautiously at the bell. Louis' round.

Round four—Brown stumbled in close, trying to open up a body attack. Ht missed a long left hook aimed at the head, then clinched again. Louis missed a long right swing by inches as Nate just pulled in his ears in time. Brown shot home a nice right to the body which did not bother Joe. Brown walked inside a swinging right to the body. Brown missed a long right, caught a left to the body and just ducked a sizzling right uppercut. Louis drove Brown through the ropes and almost dropped him with a left as Brown was outside the ring. Brown landed a looping right to the head, then caught a heavy right and another right uppercut to the head. Louis' round.

Round five—Brown's seconds worked furiously on him in his corner and their combined ministrations had him n pretty fair shape answering the bell. Louis flicked his left to the head twice and then they went into a clinch. Brown missed a left hook, then made Joe cover as he shot both hands to the head. Joe cornered Brown, who went into a clinch. Joe brought up a nice left uppercut. Nate landed a long right which did not bother Joe. Brown was just trying to keep from getting murdered at this point, not throwing any punches in return. He snapped out of it with a right to the head, then a left hook to the same spot. Brown rammed over another right to the head, then clinched. Brown covered as Joe shot hands to the body. Louis' round, but not as decisively as the four preceding it.

Round six—Brown rammed home a nice left hook to the body and backed away from a left hook to the head. Joe landed a left hook to the head and received payment in kind. Brown shot a hard overhand right to Joe's head, then snapped his foe's head back with a long left hook. Brown just got under a knockout right, then bounced back with a left and right to the head. Nate walked in with a right to the body, then shot home a left hook to the body. Nate was high with a right to the head and caught an uppercut on the chin. Brown caught a right uppercut, then dropped his head out of the ropes to keep Joe from applying the finishing touches. He was hanging on desperately after having flashed his best battling in the early portions. Louis' round.

Round seven—Natie dug both hands into the midsection, and caught a right uppercut, then landed a hard right to the head. He swung a desperate right, then fell heir to a two-fisted barrage to the body as he battled back desperately, blood streaming from his face. Brown again hung his head outside the ropes and Joe peppered him as the referee did not interfere. McClelland finally came between them and Nate tore furiously, but futilely at Louis. Louis rammed over a hard right to the head and Brown clinched. Brown was arm weary and forcing McClelland to pry them apart. Brown shot home a glancing right to the head at the bell. Louis' round. Natie had taken the worst beating he has taken in any previous fight, blood streaming from both eyes as he trudged to his corner.

Round eight—Joe flicked two lefts to the head as Brown backed away. Joe landed two hard lefts and circled Natie looking for a place to deposit a knockout wallop. Brown missed three left hooks to the head, then backed away again. Brown tried to dig into Joe's midsection, but could not as Joe covered adroitly. Brown was clinching without being hit now. He was so tired he could hardly hold his hands up. Brown's right eye was circled with blood and his left eye was bleeding profusely. He caught a hard right to the head, then ripped a left hook to the body. Joe caused Natie's knees to sag with a left and right to the head. Brown was a bloody gargoyle as he shambled to his corner again to receive the kindly and desperate ministrations of his handlers. Louis' round.

Round nine—Nate missed a left hook to the body, then weaved and bobbed his way out of trouble as Joe followed him, shooting both fists. They exchanged lefts to the head. Brown landed a glancing left to the head, then a weak right as Joe missed a terrific left. Joe chopped Natie's right eye open again with a series of short lefts. Brown stumbled into a clinch. Nate shot a hard left to the face, then backed away. Brown shot his best punch—a hard left to the body. Joe nailed Natie with a hard right and they exchanged rights at the bell. Louis' round.

Round ten—Brown stumbled wearily from his corner for the customary last-round handshake. He covered and walked into a clinch as Joe pumped both hands looking for a spot. Joe shook Brown to the heels with a terrific long right, then pumped both hands as Nate held on furiously, then flashed back with a hard left to the head.

Brown clinched and pushed Joe wearily about the ring. Joe rammed home a hard left and smashed a right to the head, staggering Brown as he attempted to clinch. They both missed wild rights. Louis landed a hard right at the bell and Referee McClelland, without a moment's hesitation, raised the Detroit Destroyer's right arm in token of victory.

Bridgewater's Sports Funds Increased, Policy Unchanged

By the Associated Press.

BRIDGEWATER, Va., March 29.—Bridgewater College, although determined to "participate in intercollegiate athletics purely as a side issue," will boost its appropriation for physical education and will permit the raising of a special fund among alumni for the purchase of new equipment.

Bridgewater, a perennial occupant of the Old Dominion's collegiate sports cellar and unable to raise adequate finances for other sports with a losing football team, ordered a sweeping review of the situation by the council on athletics.

In approving the council's report, the faculty senate reaffirmed Bridgewater's "traditional policy" of athletics as a "side issue."

"We believe," the report said, "in college athletics for the sake of their contribution to the social, moral and physical life of college men and women.

"We believe that the honor of representing the college in intercollegiate sports should be based upon high academic record, sound moral living, clean sportsmanship, and loyalty to the ideals of the college as well as athletic ability.

"We recognize the value of victory in athletics to college and team morale and we purpose to win by fair means all the games we can in all our sports. But we are not for a 'victory at any price.'"

Grove in Form As Red Sox Beat Phils

Losers Are Runless Against Ace; Rowe, Auker Blank Braves.

By the Associated Press.

SARASOTA, Fla., March 29.—Robert Moses "Lefty" Grove made his pitching debut of the spring training season today and his efforts struck a cheering note in the Boston Red Sox camp.

He pitched the first four innings in today's exhibition game against the Philadelphia National Leaguers which the Sox won, 3 to 2. He allowed but one hit—a single by Johnny Vergez—fanned three, and did not give a pass.

After the game Grove said he "didn't once feel a bit of pain at any tme, either while I was pitching or after I got through."

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 29 (AP).—"Schoolboy" Rowe was too tough for the Boston Braves today, playing a large part in the Detroit Tigers' 5-to-0 victory.

Rowe yielded but three hits in five innings and Eldon Auker, his successor, was even more effective, allowing but one hit during the rest of the game. The youthful "Schoolboy" batted in the first run, Greenburg's bat worked overtime, smashing out a home run and three singles in his first four times up.

Babe Ruth walked once and was fanned in his two times at bat.

Ruth has gone, but the Yanks are whooping, jammed with spirit, fight and manpower.

Fine Hurling Staff.

Pitching is their great strength, with Vernon (Lefty) Gomez, Charles (Red) Ruffing, Johnny Broaca, and Jimmy Deshong heading a big list. Catcher Bill Dickey and Earl Combs are healthy again. George Selkirk is playing sensational ball. The whole slugging crew—Larruping Lou Gehrig, Tony Lazzeri, Frank Crosetti, Red Rolfe, and Ben Chapman are more than ready.

The Tigers have made no changes, despite Cochrane's desperate efforts to repair his outfield weakness. Goose Goslin, Jo Jo White and Pete Fox still hold the regular fort, with the iron man infield of big Hank Greenberg, Charley Gehringer, Bill Rogell and Marvin Owen intact.

Detroit hasn't the Yankees' pitching strength, but Lynwood (Schoolboy) Rowe, Tommy Bridges and Elden Auker are young and improving. Fred Marberry heads the relief workers, and the rookies are promising.

Indians Badly Hurt.

The Indians have been badly hurt by the loss of their youhg shortstop, Billy Knickerbocker. Though Roy Hughes has looked well in camp, there's another youngster at second, Bozie Berger, and a combination such as that is a tremendous gamble. The Indian hopes rest chiefly on excellent pitchers—Mel Harder, Willis Hudlin, Oral Hildebrand, Lloyd Brown and Clint Brown, several good looking rookies—and the slugging of Odel Hale, Hal Trosky, Earl Averill, Joe Vosmik and Bruce Campbell.

But for a weak right side of the infield, the Red Sox might figure on top. A trade replacing aged Max Bishop at second with Oscar Melillo, of the Browns, is still on the fire. The rookie first baseman, Babe Dahlgren, has made a fine impression. Bill Werber, at third, and the new manager, Shortstop Joe Cronin, give the Sox the strongest left infield side in the league.

Pitching Is Question.

Pitching is another question mark. The condition of Bob Grove and that of George Pipgras still constitutes a question mark. Wes Ferrell, Rube Walberg, Fred Ostermueller, Dusty Rhodes, Johnny Welch and Henry Johnson may be enough without them. There's no question of catching with Rick Ferrell in there. Tht outfield is good.

Jimmie Foxx's shift from first to catcher has livened the A's. If the young pitchers, Johnny Marcum, Alton Benton, Sugar Cain, Joe Cascarella, Bill Dietrich and Charley Lieber come through, here's the league dark horse. The infield is well balanced with Frank Higgins, Eric McNair, Dib Williams and the classy first base rookie, Alex Hooks.

May Do Anything.

Bump Hadley's sore arm and the departure of Cronin have hurt the Senators' prospects. An otherwise veteran line-up may find the veteran pitchers, Earl Whitehill, Monte Weaver, Wally Stewart, Jack Russell, Al Thomas and Bob Burke, too old for this year's pace.

The Browns and White Sox may do anything or nothing. Rogers Hornsby, back in the game himself, has a good pitching staff, a fine catcher in Rollie Hemsley and two exceptional outfielders in Sam West and Ray Pepper.

In the Chicago White Sox Jimmy Dykes has a capable infield in himself, Appling, Hayes and Bonura, but the outfield depends on two rookies, Ray Radcliffe and George Washington, and the return to batting form of Al Simmons. His best pitchers, Ted Lyons, Sam Jones, George Earnshaw, and Whitlow Wyatt, run heavily to age.

Birmingham Wins Over Nats, 6 to 4

now working for Manager Clyde Milan, in the first three innings and established a 3-0 lead at the outset. A walk to Buddy Myer, a pair of singles by Manush and Stone and a wild throw by Right Fielder Etten were the ingredients.

Horn Begins Attack.

Center Fielder Leslie Horn, who contributed half of the Barons' six hits, began the barrage against Weaver with a single in the first inning, and Bud Clancy, formerly of the White Sox, kept it going with another single. When Willett walked and Woodward singled to center the upshot of it all was a 3-3 tie.

Weaver made the mistake of passing Moore, his rival pitcher, in the second, and Horn promptly scored him with the run that gave the Barons a 5-3 lead. Thereafter the game resolved itself into a pitching duel between Weaver and Coppola for Washington and George Murray and Dick Stewart for Birmingham.

Score One in Sixth.

The Nats, scoreless since the first inning, finally picked up a run off Murray in the sixth when Buddy Myer's double scored Lary, who had singled and had been advanced by Pinch Hitter Schulte's fly which was lost in the sun for a single.

The Barons upped it to 6-4 in the eighth when Woodward doubled after Coppola had hit Willett and there the matter remained through the ninth when, with Manush on first, Johnny Stone bashed a grounder into a double play.

sun and with little wind were the best of the three-day tournament and there was an orgy of sub-par firing in the final round. Serafin, like Runyan, finished with a 68, and there were 69s from Dick Chapman, of Grenewich, Conn., who was low amateur with 297; Herman Barron, Port Chester, N. Y.; Jimmy Hines, Garden City, Long Island, and Vic Ghezzi, Deal, N. J., as well as a flock of 70s.

Cruickshank in Tie.

Their 69s pulled Hines and Ghezzi into a tie for sixth place with Bobby Cruickshank, little Scot from Richmond, Va., at 288.

Walter Hagen, of Detroit, who barely qualified for the last day's play with a 36-hole total of 154, decided to try skeet shooting for a change and scratched.

Willie Macfarlane, Tuckahoe (N. Y.) veteran and former open champion, also dropped out after reaching the three-quarters mark with 222.

Such well-known pros as Wiffy Cox, Horton Smith, Joe Turnesa, Frank Walsh and Johnny Farrell were out of the money.

Stocks Stiffen, But Some Rails Show Declines

Quickening of Activity Is Reported by Survey of Industry.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 29.—Wall street reaction today to the Belgian devaluation and the St. Paul reorganization plan was chiefly one of relief. The stock market stiffened in spots, with rail shares perking up a little, evidently reflecting short covering. Second-grade rail bonds continued their downhill slide.

Rail shares were helped a little by the weekly report of freight movement, showing a larger than seasonal gain over the previous week of 10,348 cars which brought the total within 2,258 cars of the total for the same week of last year.

The weekly mercantile reviews reported notable quickening of activity as the belated Easter shopping season draws nearer. Hopes that April will be a good month for retail trade, automobiles and several consumers goods lines were high.

Kennecott ran into profit taking on publication of its earnings report and closed off a fraction. In oils, Texas Corporation rose ¾ of a point in response to earnings of 59 cents a share for 1934, against a small deficit in 1933, then reacted to close ¼ lower at 17¼. Firm spots in the rails included Union Pacific, up 1¼ at 84¾, and Santa Fe, which rose 1¼, only to slip back to 36½, where its gain was only ¼. Coco Cola was again bought, getting above the 200 mark. Bohn Aluminum rose a couple of points and Farm Implements pushed up fractionally. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks finished unchanged at 36.2. Sales were only 461,040 shares.

The Belgian plan to devalue 25 per cent, possibly 30, and return to the free gold standard as soon as possible, was not viewed as likely to have much effect here.

Promise of Rain Lowers Wheat

Cotton Steadies With Prices 12 to 18 Points Higher.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 29.—Unsettlement of European finances, together with indications of moisture relief for much drought-stricken domestic crop territory, led to moderate setbacks of wheat prices today.

Monetary uncertainty resulted both from a sudden rise in British exchange rates and from proposed devaluation of Belgian currency. One of the immediate consequences was to exert a restraining effect on grain trade activity, and to serve as a drag on most agricultural values.

Wheat closed easy, at the same as yesterday's finish to ¾ lower, May, 94½ to 94⅝; corn, ⅛ to ⅝ up; May, 79¼ to 79⅜; oats, unchanged to ⅛ off, and provisions unchanged to 12 cents decline.

Corn and oats mainly followed wheat, but in the closing hour the corn market developed comparative strength that was associated with enlarged shipping demand here. Provisions lacked adequate buying support.

Foreign Markets.

LONDON, March 29 (AP).—Business on the stock exchange today was restricted by the unsettled condition of the foreign markets following the devaluation of the belgas and the unsettled sentiments political situation. Gilt-edged securities and industrials eased on lack of support, while German, French and Belgian bonds weakened. Copper shares were better due to the agreements reached at the copper conference. Transatlantic issues held steady. The market closed undecided.

BERLIN—Business was active on the bourse today with purchasers of foreign issues anxious over the belga. The market, however, was strong with the exception of rentes and Young plan shares which closed lower. Armaments and raw material stocks led the improvement. The closing was strong.

BERLIN—After a dull opening, prices became firmer on the bourse today. The closing was weaker.

Great Britain, Because of Managed Currency Theory, Is Not Disposed to Stabilize Pound in Relation to Dollar at Present Quotations.

By a Special Correspondent.

New York, March 29.—Unwillingness of the British authorities to agree to a stabilization of the pound sterling at anything like its present quotation in relation to the dollar reflects the dominant position there of the "managed currency" school of thought.

Economists favoring currency management, several of whom are close advisers of the Bank of England and the British treasury, hold that the commodity price level within a country can be manipulated and adjusted to other cost elements in its economic system through variation in the value of its currency in terms of other monetary units. In Great Britain, the problem is held to be chiefly one of keeping up the price level, through changes in the quotation of the pound sterling, so as to permit industry as a whole to operate at a reasonable margin of profit despite a very rigid level of labor costs imposed by a strong labor union structure.

Proponents of currency management like to cite the experience of Great Britain before and after September, 1931, when the gold standard was abondoned, to prove their point. Prior to that date, the rigidity of her wage system was generally recognized as one of the greatest obstacles to lasting economic prosperity for Great Britain. Thus, while the Economist's index of wholesale commodity prices declined from 159 in 1924 to 91 in January, 1931, the index of wages declined only from 100 in 1924 to 96 in 1931. Labor costs were seriously maladjusted in relation to commodity prices, and the competitive position of British producers in foreign markets was materially weakened as a result.

Strength of British Labor Keeps Wages Up.

The strength of the British labor unions stood squarely in the way of a reduction in wages commensurate with the decline in retail and wholesale prices. The other alternative was to increase commodity prices. This was finally sought through abandonment of the gold standard and depreciation of the pound sterling. As the pound declined, prices of imported commodities rose for a time, and the index of wholesale prices advanced from 85 in August, 1931, to 92 in February, 1932. This rise in prices was not accompanied by an increase in wages, and thus there was some correction of the maladjustment between labor costs and prices.

However, when a number of other countries followed the example of Great Britain in abandoning the gold standard and then linked their currencies to the pound, thus forming the sterling bloc, fluctuation of the pound in relation to gold ceased to influence materially prices of commodities as expressed in sterling. Most leading commodities that enter international trade either originate in the British Empire to a large degree, or have their principal markets in British countries, and therefore they are largely quoted in sterling. Changes in the pound's quotation in terms of gold have come to have little meaning for such commodity markets. Since last August the pound has declined by about 6.2 per cent in relation to the dollar, but the Economist's index of commodity prices, instead of rising, actually declined from 92.3 in August to 91.3 at the beginning of this month.

British Cost Status Matter of Concern.

With prices now relatively stable in terms of sterling, the rigidity of production costs in Great Britain, particularly labor costs, has again become a matter of concern there. A decline in the pound, particularly if accompanied or followed by a further devaluation of the dollar, would have a deflationary influence on gold bloc countries without affecting sterling prices of commodities materially.

British economists and industrialists mostly recognize, therefore, that fluctuations in the pound no longer impart an element of flexibility to prices, to offset the rigidity of the British wage structure.

While the forces of recovery in Britain, particularly the high rate of activity in the building industry, may continue to exert themselves for some time to come, conservative British opinion is again reverting strongly to the view that only by increasing exports can recovery be sustained. This, however, has again brought up the question as to how, since British wages were not materially deflated during the depression period, Great Britain can strengthen her competitive position in international markets.

Two methods have been suggested to remedy the situation. One is rationalization of industry to cut costs, and the other general currency stabilization. The latter alternative, by making business men less fearful of the future and by permitting a revival of international lending, would stimulate foreign trade and raise prices, it is argued.

Million Barrels of Oil a Day Needed for Use and Reserves

Hose Survey Finds That New Production Has Not Kept Pace With Increased Consumption; New Types of Machinery an Important Factor.

New York, March 29.—From considerations of production, consumption, oil in storage, present estimated reserves and future supply, it is apparent that in the face of all the oil that has been produced in the United States, discovery of new production has, in reality, not kept pace with the increased consumption. In short, consumption has increased much faster than discoveries of new pools or reserves. In these circumstances, it is of paramount importance not only to the petroleum industry but to the public as well that new discoveries be accomplished if we are to expect to maintain adequate future reserves. These facts are set forth in today's T. S. Hose oil review, which outlines the course by which consumption has outdistanced production.

"The history of the petroleum industry," says the review, "discloses that because of mechanical inventions, with the consequent increased use of all types of machinery in substantially all fields of human endeavor, consumption of petroleum products has been on the uptrend constantly since oil was first discovered in this country.

"From time to time, sensational discoveries of new and prolific fields have been made which, in the absence of proper control of production, have occasioned a temporary flooding of the market. But such new discoveries have not been of consequence sufficient to justify the expectation that they would increase or extend the quantity or life of our reserves for future supply.

"Following are the new discoveries and consumption approximated from 1930 to 1934, inclusive:

(In millions of barrels.)

Year.	Consumption.	New discoveries.
1930	1,000	(East Texas)	2,100
1931	1,000	(None)
1932	1,000	(Conroe)	500
1933	1,000	(None)
1934	1,000	(Fitts)	500
Totals	5,000		3,100

"The seriousness of this table is apparent when we consider that during this five-year period new discoveries were short of consumption by approximately 1,900,000,000 barrels of an annual shortage of 380,000,000 barrels if our known future supply be held to only a stationary point. The picture represents that from 1930 to 1934, inclusive, if our known reserves were to be maintained, there should have been discovered new fields at the rate of approximately 1,000,000 barrels each day for the entire five-year period.

"Statistics establish that for each ten-year period from 1890 to 1930, inclusive, consumption has far more than doubled. Not so with new production. It is obvious, in this circumstance, that to keep our estimated reserves at about ten years' future supply new discoveries must be at least equivalent of each year's consumption."

Fight to Head Stock Exchange At White Heat

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 29.—The controversy over who shall head the New York Stock Exchange after Richard Whitney's current term appears to have reached a climax this week, with the "reelect Whitney" forces trying to convince the nominating committee of their numerical strength.

It is being bandied about Wall street as a sort of open secret that the nominating committee has all but decided to name Charles R. Gay for the presidency on April 8.

Reliable sources reported that the Whitney banner is being carried by Herbert L. Wellington, dynamic, popular and youngish member of the board of governors and head of the firm of H. L. Wellington & Co.

The Gay backing appears to come chiefly from a number of the large commission houses, which have long felt the exchange was too much dominated by the specialists and floor traders. E. A. Pierce, peppery, silver-haired chief of E. A. Pierce & Co., is among those known to be agitating for a chance, but he has not publicly indorsed Gay.

New Issues Give Impetus To Bond Sales

But Baltimore & Ohio 5s Yield 4½ Points; British Bonds Up.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 29.—The bond market welcomes an opportunity to busy itself with other things than declining railroad loans today and jumped wholeheartedly into newly distributed issues.

New bonds of the Pacific Gas & Electric Co. and the Chicago Union Station Co., both distributed yesterday, in the amount of $61,000,000, were reported to have enjoyed a wide market in over-the-counter trading and commanded a premium of around 2 points before leveling off. This excellent reception whetted the market's appetite and centered its interest in forthcoming new offerings which are expected to make their appearance in the near future.

But try as it would, the market could not get away from the shaky rail bonds entirely. A decline of 2¼ points in Baltimore & Ohio first 5s to 101½ was the principal reason for the Associated Press average of 10 low-yield bonds yielding four-tenths of a point to 101½, while declines of 1 to 2.

The foreign section was further upset by developments in Poland and the bonds of that country declined sharply along with obligations of Belgium and some of the private German bonds. United Kingdom 5½s rose more than 3 points to 115 and the 4s were a shade better.

Transfers aggregated $9,428,000 par value, compared with $11,273,000 on Thursday.

Two Railroads to Pay Bond Interest Due

Cleveland, March 29 (AP).—Directors of the Denver & Rio Grande Western Railroad voted today to pay interest due January 1 and April 1, on the first consolidated 4 per cent bonds of 1939 of the Rio Grande Western.

The directors discussed reorganization of the capital structure, but reached no decision. They voted to defer payment on the April 1 interest on first consolidated 4 per cent bonds of 1949 of Rio Grande Western, the 6 per cent bonds of 1972, Denver & Rio Grande Western, and the 5 per cent bonds of 1978 of the Denver & Rio Grande Western.

New York, March 29 (AP).—A. S. Pierce, vice president of the Chicago & North Western Railway, said today that the road will pay interest and principal due April 1 amounting to $946,000.

Chesebrough Is Off 23½ Points

Other Issues Maintain Fairly Steady Tone in Light Trading.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 29.—The curb market maintained a fairly steady tone today despite some erratic price movements among specialty shares.

A number of small gains were recorded in the industrial list. Utilities were narrow. Transfers approximated 90,000 shares, compared with 121,000 the day before.

The appearance of a bad earnings statement by Chesebrough Manufacturing brought out a few offerings, which resulted in a loss of 23½ points. Pepperell Manufacturing yielded about 1½, while a gain of about similar proportion was recorded by Newmont Mining.

Small fractional improvement was the keynote among such issues as American Cyanamid B, American Gas & Electric, International Petroleum, Pioneer Gold and Swift International.

Duquesne Issue Expected.

New York, March 29 (AP).—Wall street investment circles hear that the flow of new bond offerings for refunding purposes may include some activity by the Duquesne Light Co. of Pennsylvania. The company is reported considering plans for retiring its outstanding $70,000,000 first mortgage 4½ per cent series A and B bonds, due in 1967 and 1957, respectively. If refunding is attempted, the new issue is expected to carry a considerably lower coupon rate.

Boston Wool Market.

Boston, March 29 (AP) (U. S. Dept. Agr.).—A fairly active trade was going on in the wool market. Sales were a little slower on the medium fleeces of average combing and clothing staple, but prices were steady at 45@48 cents scoured basis for clothing 56s three-eighths blood, and 41@43 cents for strictly combing 48s. 50s quarter blood. Fine Ohio delaine or strictly combing 64s and finer fleeces sold occasionally at 26@27 cents in the grease. Shorter staple of similar lines comprised mostly of French combing and some clothing staple brought 21@22 cents in the grease.

The best record ever made by horse and rider was made by Steve Donoghue, England's outstanding jockey, and Brown Jack, when they won the Queen Alexandra Stakes at Ascot six years in a row beginning in 1929. Brown Jack was a 10-year-old when he won the stakes last year for the sixth consecutive time, finishing two lengths ahead of 4-year-old Solatium. He is owned by Sir Harold Wernher who announced last year that Brown Jack will never run again at Ascot.

Jockey Donoghue is also a veteran of the track. He is 50 years old and still riding—his ups and downs during his career are a high point in turf history. He has won the English Derby six times—three of those wins were consecutive, and just after that he rode 108 consecutive losers. Purses won by Donoghue's mounts in 13 years totaled $1,250,000, and he himself at one time earned an average of $100,000 a year.

Engineer D. J. Fant, of a crack Southern limited, is not an ordained minister—but his experience as a preacher has extended far and wide. He has been the railroad's service 48 years, 27 years on the run from Atlanta to Greenville, and during that time he has preached in every town along the way. On the front of his big engine the company has placed a brass plate representing an open Bible with a passage from the Book of John engraved on the pages.

Walt Mason, Himself

The Old Writers.

It's hard to read the books of yore, the authors wrote such long-drawn stuff; of words they used some twenty-four where ten would surely be enough. I read the sages of old days until I'm tired and half asleep, and then rejoice in modern ways, the snappy style our writers keep. Good old Sam Johnson set the pace that writers followed, year by year; his style was rather a disgrace, he failed to make his meaning clear. He ambled to the right and left, he journeyed to the east and west, until the reader is bereft of all the patience he possessed. No man can read Sam Johnson now, no man can read his hefty prose, without a poultice on his brow, and smelling salts to help his nose. Yet in Sam's day he was admired far more than any other man, and all the writing boys aspired to travel with the Johnson clan. Old William Hazlitt was a peach who had instructive things to tell; he used to lecture, write and preach on all the arts, and did it well. He drew vast crowds when he was billed to lecture at the village hall; in oratory he was skilled, and he was one who knew it all. Although his talents are so strong, I find his lectures hard to read; his sentences are six feet long, and he lacks vim and pep and speed. We speak with reverence of those who died before we hit the earth, maintaining that their verse and prose embody all there is of worth. ut when we try to read their books, their laggard lines that sag and creak, we cry, "Ods fish hooks and gadzooks! Give us a book produced last week!"

The Federal Diary

(Trade-Mark Applied For.)

By Morgan Baker.

TENNIS players at the Patent Office, stronghold of Government racquet wielders, and holder of the Interdepartmental Tennis League championship, are up in arms over the proposed removal of the courts at the Monument to make way for a levee and to "beautify" the Mall.

BAKER.

They point out that courts could be built on the levee, but no such item seems to be included in the dike plan.

"It's a shame," says Arturo Tomelden, manager of the Patent Office tennis team. "There doesn't seem to be any need for removing the courts. It's hard enough to get tennis court reservations with the present number. What are we to do with a reduction?"

Ray Stocklinski, 1934 Patent Office tennis champion, has the same thoughts on the subject.

Harry Goldsmith (P), who wears out three or four racquets a season on the Monument courts, thinks it will nip in the bud the rising interest which employes have exhibited in the past few years.

"The Monument courts have been the rendezvous for Washington players—both dubs and experts," Mr. Goldsmith says. "Here, after 4:30, the overworked Government employe, because of the central location of the courts, could engage in an hour or two of honest, healthy sport before darkness fell. With Henry Park courts on the way out and Monument, too, players will have to travel long distaces to reach courts only to find them all filled because of the shortage."

Mr. Goldsmith thinks that removal of the courts might force the abandonment of the Government Tennis League, and perhaps the Capital City Tennis League.

K. of C. Hospitality.

An invitation is issued to the thousands of young men and women in Government circles, who are here without intimate friends, to visit the Knights of Columbus Club. Francis A. McCann (P), club officer, announces the club has created a reason for their visiting the club.

"Tonight," Mr. McCann saiys, "we will give the first of a series of Saturday night bingo parties, beginning at 8:15. About 10 o'clock we will hold an open house in our beautifully decorated grill, which has the atmosphere of a night club. This is not a commercial club, but one where men and women may gather in pleasant conversation. Here they will find 'Old World hospitality in the modern American manner.'

"After strangers once have entered our club, we take care of them and make them feel that they are among friends."

A gravity actuated device for indicating different subterranean structures has just been patented by Harvey C. Hayes (F), Navy. It is said the instrument will be particularly useful in ascertaining the location of oil deposits, such as those below the "salt domes" in Texas.

OPEN discussion and dancing will follow the dinner meeting of the Junior New Dealers Club at the LaSalle Building Tuesday night, according to Roland Hill, Federal Home Loan Bank Board, president. Representative Elmer J. Ryan will be the principal speaker, outlining the New Deal from the Democratic point of view. The last meeting was addressed by Representative Dewey Short, who gave the Republican viewpoint.

Assisting Mr. Hill in "seeing that the youth of Washington has a New Deal" are the following Federal people: Thomas Spangler, FERA, vice president; Robert Dennis, Bureau of Aeronautics, board member, and Wayne Hansen, HOLC, chairman, board of directors.

Miss Wilma Van Denman (C), Internal Revenue, is the author of an editorial on "Reorganization in Income Tax Legislation," in the current issue of the the Review. Miss Van Denman is president of Kappa Beta Pi, women's legal sorority at George Washington University and is a member of the staff of the George Washington Law Review.

IF F, P or C, follows your name in this column call in person on the Federal Diary editor between 4:30 and 6 p. m. today. You will receive tickets to one of the following Loew's theaters: (F) Loew's Fox (stage, Benny Davis and his Star Dust Revue; screen, "George White's 1935 Scandals"); or to (P) Loew's Palace (second week of Will Rogers in "Life Begins at 40"); or to (C. Loew's Columbia (Shirley Temple and Lionel Barrymore in "The Little Colonel").

If one could spend those 15 days
In only pleasant sorts o' ways,
It wouldn't be so hard to take it—
But let a body try to make it!

E. F. Campbell to Retire.

Edwin F. Campbell (P) will be honored today by Capt. R. S. Patton and a host of other friends as he retires from the position of lithographic pressman at Coast and Geodetic Survey, Commerce.

Born in Prince William County, Va., 65 years ago today, Mr. Campbell received his early education in the Virginia public schools and the District. He entered Government service with the Survey August 5, 1898 when Henry S. Pritchett was head of the bureau, and has served continuously during the administrations of Otto H. Tittmann and Ernest Lester Jones, as well as under Capt. Patton, the present director.

Capt. Patton not only will give Mr. Campbell a gold watch as a token of the esteem in which he is held by his former associates, but also will give him an emblem of his new occupation—a gigantic lock. Some of Mr. Campbell's friends have learned that with the approach of his retirement, being but 65 years young, he has been looking around for a new activity and has selected that of locksmith. Flowers and cigars also will be profusely present.

Justice Department Boys Reporters.

The Athletic Association of the Federal Bureau of Investigation has begun publication of The Bureau Reporter, a booklet of bureau activities. Its first two issues have been received enthusiastically. The staff is as follows:

F. Finley, editor; R. W. Finkel, publicity manager; O. H. Patterson, baseball; D. Rice, basket ball; Q. Tamm, bowling; P. C. Brines, J. A. Connors and J. J. O'Connell, reporters, and R. T. Harbo (F), secretary.

Due to the success of the last stag party of the Government Printing Office Alumni, another is scheduled for next Saturday at N. Auth & Co., Seventh and D streets southwest, for 6:30 to 10:30 p. m.

CLARENCE COTTAM, Division of Wild Life Research, Bureau of Biological Survey, has written a booklet on "The Present Situation Regarding Eelgrass," which is being distributed to conservationists and others. Eelgrass is a submerged water plant of wide distribution and is an important food of wild fowl of many species. The rapid disappearance of this plant has caused alarm among wild fowl conservationists and game officials.

Royal Pair to Go Home.

Symphony to End Season Tomorrow

Annual Request Program to Be Presented.

Presenting the annual "request" program, the National Symphony Orchestra will give its last concert of the season tomorrow afternoon in Constitution Hall, under the direction of Hans Kindler. The compositions to be played have been chosen by the patrons, who have been sending their ballots to the management during the past month.

The concert will open with the overture to Mozart's "Die Zauberfloete," which will be followed by Schubert's B minor ("Unfinished") symphony. Other items on the program are "The Ride of the Valkyries" (Wagner), the slow movement from Dvorak's E minor symphony ("From the New World"), Brahms' Hungarian Dance No. 1, the Johann Strauss waltz, "Kuenstlerleben," and the tone poem, "Finlandia," by Sibelius.

After tomorrow's concert, the musicians of the orchestra will enjoy a vacation of ten weeks before inaugurating a series of outdoor summer concerts at the Water Gate near the Lincoln Memorial. This will be the first series of outdoor concerts ever given by a symphony orchestra in Washington.

Last 2 Days! 39th Anniversary!

STUDEBAKER STEPS OUT IN WASHINGTON!

Increased business forces expansion!

LEE D. BUTLER, Inc.

MOVES

into larger quarters!

Sharply reduced delivered prices feature Fifth Anniversary of Lee D. Butler, Inc. and formation of the new and greater Studebaker Corporation

Five years ago, in March, 1930, we opened our doors in Washington. For five years, during a difficult period, we have made steady progress.

Now we are moving into splendid new sales and service quarters in convenient locations and with adequate room for our rapidly growing business.

We are proud of our record and grateful to the thousands of loyal Washington people who have given us their business and their friendly cooperation in steering others in our direction.

New Studebaker Corporation Reduces Prices

We are particularly happy that our Fifth Anniversary coincides with the formation of the financially strong, new and greater Studebaker Corporation and with sharp reductions on the new 1935 Studebaker Presidents, Commanders and Dictators.

Studebaker now has millions of dollars in new capital and no bank loans. Its financial structure has been adjusted to a thrifty 1935 basis. Plants have been written down from $49,000,000 to $15,000,000. All burdensome overhead has been swept away. And Studebaker is immediately passing these economies on to the public.

These big, roomy, magnificently appointed Miracle-Ride Studebaker Champions of 1935 are the finest motor cars that have ever borne the name-plate of Studebaker, oldest manufacturer of vehicles in the world.

Four-Door Studebaker Sedan for Only $878 Delivered

Imagine It! For $878—nothing more to pay—you can now get a superbly styled new four-door, six-passenger Studebaker Dictator Sedan.

And, mind you, that's the Washington delivered price. It includes Federal taxes and complete equipment—bumpers, bumper guards, spare tire and tube, metal spring covers, metal tire covers, radiator emblem, etc.

You would pay almost as much, delivered, for one of the lowest priced cars. And you still wouldn't have a Studebaker with Studebaker prestige and performance, and with Studebaker long-life and economy.

Exceptional New Roominess And Sleekness of Line!

With their slim, silvery radiators, their sweeping gull's wing fenders, their air-curved tops and rear decks, these new Miracle-Ride Studebakers are the roomiest, best looking automobiles for the money a search of Washington will find.

Steel Bodies with Steel Pillars

The bodies are seamless steel reinforced by steel with super-strong dual dome cowls and steel roof panels welded to steel pillars, not wood pillars.

And Studebaker was first of the 1935 cars to move the engine forward for greater roominess and riding comfort.

Go for a "Third-Degree" Road Test

Come in and go for a driving trial today. See for yourself that these new Miracle-Ride Studebakers offer the world's first perfect combination of restful riding, sure footedness and obedient handling.

See why so many new Studebakers are appearing every week on Washington's streets—and why all through the years of depression Studebaker sales in Washington held to such high levels.

Our new showrooms and general office are conveniently located opposite the Mayflower Hotel. This building includes our main used car display room which faces on 18th St.

Our new service building at 1121 21st Street (between I. & M Sts.) has an area of 45,000 square feet and a capacity of over 300 cars. You will find here the latest service equipment and factory trained mechanics.
